The group poses in front of the fountain in the courtyard of La Merced Catholic Church in Antigua.
IU Kokomo students Kaitlyn Jarman, Ann Andrzejewski, Brittany Shiflet, and Laura Durr work with children at the after school enrichment program at the Open Windows Foundation in San Miguel Dueñas.
Dr. Linda Wallace of IU Kokomo and Phil Goddard of Indianapolis work together to make “silly putty” with children at the Open Windows Foundation. The theme of the activities was the five senses.
IU Kokomo student, Gloria Schroeder and her daughter Briana Carter do five senses activities at Open Windows Foundation.
IU Kokomo student Laura Durr and Butler University Lisa Fehsenfeld work with children at Open Windows Foundation.
IU Kokomo students Kim Porter and Terra Lawson teach children to make paper-cup telephones. Some of the children show off the masks they made as part of the afternoon’s activities.
IU Kokomo student Ed Costa and Dr. David Williams of Cicero make “silly putty” with children at Open Windows Foundation.
IU Kokomo students Sarah Kahn, Gloria Schroeder, Terra Lawson, Allison Hoover and Dr. Linda Wallace work with the organization Vamos Adelante to treat children for head lice in the community of El Rodeo.
Gloria Schroeder, Kim Porter, David Williams, Sarah Kahn, Briana Carter, Laura Durr, Allison Hoover, and Ann Andrzejewski take a well-deserved lunch break after a long morning of doing lice treatments.
Christine Taff talks to the group during lunch on the first day of lice treatments in the community of El Rodeo.
IU Kokomo student Ed Costa and Briana Carter distribute toys to children at an after school enrichment program in the community of San Andrés Osuna.
Brittany Shiflet and Dr. Linda Wallace blow bubbles and play with children at an after school enrichment program in the community of San Andrés Osuna.
IU Kokomo student Terra Lawson in front of the group’s bus with children from the Vamos Adelante after school enrichment program.
Kim Porter, Sarah Kahn, Brittany Shiflet at the Convento de las Capuchinas – an 18th century Catholic convent.
Courtyard of La Merced Catholic Church in Antigua.
Alfombra: hand-made carpets of colored saw dust made as part of large street processions as the people of Antigua prepare for Easter.
Ed Costa and Dr. Linda Wallace take an early morning walk and enjoy the “alfombras.”
Street processions in Antigua in preparation for Easter.
View of the Volcano Agua from Antigua’s central park.
IU Kokomo student Terra Lawson and fellow travelers Lisa Fehsenfeld and Judy Guevara climb the Volcano Pacaya.
Ed Costa, Gloria Schroeder, Kaitlyn Jarman, and Allison Hoover enjoy a farewell dinner at Casa Santo Domingo in Antigua.