Principles Adopted

• What an accrediting agency should expect of an institution:
  – Centrality of student learning in its mission, institution defines quality by how well it achieves mission
  – Documentation of student learning, (clear goals, evidence, interpretation of data & making judgments, using evidence to effect improvements)
  – Compilation of evidence, multiple means, levels, curricular, co-curricular, intentional & unintentional learning
- Compilation of evidence, multiple means, levels, curricula, co-curricular, intentional & unintentional learning

- Stakeholder involvement, collection, interpretation, use of evidence is a collective endeavor

INDIANA UNIVERSITY
KOKOMO’S
PLAN TO BUILD A CULTURE
OF ASSESSMENT

Sharon Calhoon
Director of the Center for Teaching Learning and Assessment

Stuart Green
Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs
Why A Culture of Assessment?

1. The new NCA/HLC Standards place ongoing assessment at the center of the accreditation process.

2. Even campuses that have been active in assessment will be held to a higher standard under the new criteria.

3. Carefully planned and systematically executed campus-wide assessment is vital to improving the quality of education at IU Kokomo.

4. It will enable the campus to ascertain what activities are effective in key areas such as recruiting and retention.
5. Assessment is everyone’s responsibility and must involve all facets of the campus, while still emphasizing the academic experience.

6. Campuses will be expected to demonstrate a new level of maturity in their assessment practices.
Strategic Objectives

1. Engage campus community in a conversation on accreditation and the role of assessment in the accreditation process.
2. Using CTE funds establish a Center for Teaching, Learning, and Assessment (CTLA).
3. Identify internal leadership to coordinate assessment initiative.
4. Assign support staff to CTLA.
Anticipated Strategic Outcomes

• The campus will manifest a mature assessment culture within three years.
• All faculty and staff will understand the work of assessment and the campus will share a common language of assessment.
• Every department will have clear, operational assessment plans that show patterns of evidence supporting at minimum 75% of their learning outcomes.
• The campus will have the data it needs to write its self study in 2007-2008.
Three Year Assessment Plan
Year One

• Inventory current status of assessment efforts
• Develop infrastructure for data management, report writing, feedback loops, and accountability measures.
• Identify learning outcomes for current general education categories and develop plan for assessing those outcomes
Three Year Assessment Plan

• Create a common assessment “language” (common terminology that all units will use to describe their assessment activities and outcomes).

• Support unit-specific and general education activities in developing and implementing assessment plans.
Three Year Assessment Plan
Year Two

• Assist units in refining and implementing assessment plans
• Implement general education assessment
• Refine assessment infrastructure (database, consulting activities)
• Plan feedback loops and report on assessment findings to campus and community constituencies
Three Year Assessment Plan
Year Three

- Assess effectiveness of CTLA activities and report outcomes to campus and trustees
- Implement feedback loops for action on improving programs
- Continue supporting unit and general education activities
- Evaluate progress toward meeting accreditation standards for assessment
Involve Everyone in Assessment

• The Council of Regional Accrediting Commissions notes that institutions derive evidence of student learning from multiple sources: courses, curricula, co-curricula, and includes both intended and unintended learning experiences. Assessment can enhance campus connectivity.

• The CTLA will serve all units, academic and non academic

• The CTLA director will chair a campus-wide Assessment Committee to include assessment coordinators form campus units
Serving as a Sustainable Model

• The ultimate goal is for the campus to develop effective, sustainable assessment practices that will extend beyond the 2008 accreditation visit.

• In addition, the work of the CTLA in fostering a culture of assessment and in assessing its own effectiveness, will model best practices for individual campus units and, perhaps, for other regional campuses.
