IU Alumni Reception at the American Association of Law Librarians Conference

Monday, July 20, 2015
Marriott Downtown, Philadelphia, PA

Hello from Bloomington!

The annual conference of the American Association of Law Librarians takes place in the City of Brotherly Love July 18-21.

We hope you'll attend the IU alumni reception we're hosting on Monday, July 20, from 5:30 to 6:30 pm.

We'll be in Marriott Room 309-310 at the Marriott Downtown in Philadelphia. Catch up with former classmates and meet new colleagues, while enjoying tasty appetizers and quenching libations on us.

Please RSVP today. If you have questions, contact me, Mary Beth Roska, or call me at 812-856-0591. We look forward to a great gathering!

THATCamp Indiana 2015

Friday, July 24, 2015
Ruth Lilly Medical Library, Indianapolis, IN

The Scholarly Communication Committee of the Academic Libraries of Indiana (ALI) organization is pleased to invite you to participate in our first THATCamp on Friday, July 24 at the Ruth Lilly Medical Library in Indianapolis. Registration, parking, and food are provided by ALI, so this event is free of charge for all attendees. All you need to do is bring your ideas and enthusiasm! We strongly encourage librarians, graduate students, archivists, technologists, and anyone interested in learning or talking about the changing landscape of scholarly communications in the humanities or other disciplines. Attendance is limited, so please register as soon as possible.

THATCamp stands for "The Humanities and Technology Camp." THATCamps are "unconferences," which means that specific sessions will be determined on the day of the camp and will be based on the interests of the attendees. You can propose sessions prior to the day of the event, and you are welcome to bring your ideas for sessions on the day of the camp as well. You can also submit proposals for two minute "dork shorts" prior to the event. These short presentations will give you the opportunity to share your ideas, projects, or plans with attendees.

Register for THATCamp Indiana 2015

Propose a session or "dork short"

More on THATCamps:

THATCamp stands for "The Humanities and Technology Camp." It is an unconference: an open, inexpensive meeting where humanists and technologists of all skill levels learn and build together in sessions proposed on the spot. An unconference is to a conference what a seminar is to a lecture, what a party at your house is to a church wedding, what a pick-up game of Ultimate Frisbee is to an NBA game, what a jam band is to a symphony orchestra: it's more informal and more participatory. Here are the key characteristics of a THATCamp:

- It's collaborative: there are no spectators at a THATCamp. Everyone participates, including in the task of setting an agenda or program.
- It's informal: there are no lengthy proposals, papers, presentations, or product demos. The emphasis is on productive, collegial work or free-form discussion.
- It's spontaneous and timely, with the agenda / schedule / program being mostly or entirely created by all the participants during the first session of the first day, rather than weeks or months beforehand by a program committee.
- It's productive: participants are encouraged to use session time to create, build, write, hack, and solve problems.
- It's lightweight and inexpensive to organize: we generally estimate that a THATCamp takes about 100 hours over the course of six months and about $4000.
- It's not-for-profit and either free or inexpensive (under $30) to attend: it's funded by small sponsorships, donations of space and labor, and by passing the hat around to the participants.
- It's small, having anywhere from 25 or 50 to about 150 participants: most THATCamps aim for about 75 participants.
- It's non-hierarchical and non-disciplinary and inter-professional: THATCamps welcome graduate students, scholars, librarians, archivists, museum professionals, developers and programmers, K-12 teachers, administrators, managers, and funders as well as people from the non-profit sector, people from the for-profit sector, and interested amateurs. The topic “the humanities and technology” contains multitudes.

- It’s open and online: participants make sure to share their notes, documents, pictures, and other materials from THATCamp discussions before and after the event on the web and via social media.
- It’s fun, intellectually engaging, and a little exhausting.

What is an “unconference”?

The shortest answer is this: an unconference is a highly informal conference. Two differences are particularly notable. First, at an unconference, the program isn’t set beforehand: it’s created on the first day with the help of all the participants rather than beforehand by a program committee. Second, at an unconference, there are no presentations — all participants in an unconference are expected to talk and work with fellow participants in every session. An unconference is to a conference what a seminar is to a lecture; going to an unconference is like being a member of an improv troupe where going to a conference is (mostly) like being a member of an audience. Unconferences are also free or cheap and open to all. For more information, see Wikipedia’s entry on the unconference.

Some say that the first unconference was BarCamp, which is the model for THATCamp. Read more about BarCamp at barcamp.org, radar.oreilly.com/2005/08/bar-camp.html, and en.wikipedia.org/wiki/BarCamp.

Who should attend?

Anyone with energy and an interest in the humanities and/or technology.

Is a THATCamp only for scholars / grad students / librarians / archivists / programmers / instructional technologists? Can scholars / grad students / librarians / archivists / programmers / instructional technologists apply?

No to the first, yes to the second. THATCamp aims at the broadest diversity of backgrounds and skills possible.

This year's conference theme, What Does It All Mean?: Unpacking the Information Literacy Framework, is inspired by the discourse around the recent development of an Information Literacy Framework that has enlivened the library instruction community and challenged us to consider new possibilities for defining, teaching, and assessing information literacy on college and university campuses. Attendees of this colloquium will have the opportunity to participate in workshops designed to engage participants in question-raising, solution-proposing, and idea-generating around one (or more) of the six frames of the ACRL Framework for Information Literacy for Higher Education and its application to librarians' approaches to instruction, assessment, and leadership in higher education.

The workshop descriptions and additional information about the event are available via the Colloquium web site:
<http://iuk.libguides.com/IULILC2015>.

Registration is limited to 100 participants and will end on Friday, July 10. The $60 registration fee will include light refreshments, lunch, and all relevant conference materials.

Staff News

Virginia Sojdehei Resigns

I am happy to share the news that Virginia Sojdehei is now the Coordinator of Library Services at Tidewater Community College in Norfolk, Virginia. This position is one that will allow Virginia to combine her many areas of expertise and to help guide and direct a vibrant library. Virginia is joining an institution at which she will thrive, and one that will benefit from her talents. We will miss her greatly in the Reference Services department, and I will always appreciate her superb organization, never-ending collegiality, and unflappable grace.
