

Visiting Artist Lecture Series

Jeff Rich

7 pm Thursday, November 20, 2014

Louise E. Addicott and Yatish J. Joshi Performance Hall

Artist Statement

This presentation traces the evolution of the watershed project over the last 10 years. With this project, I intend to highlight this relationship between land, water, and man within the Mississippi River watershed, the largest watershed in North America. Every watershed is made up of smaller watersheds or basins, and the southern portion of the Mississippi Watershed is made up of three major river basins, the French Broad, the Tennessee, and the Mississippi. Each of these basins form a chapter in the project.

BIOGRAPHY

Jeff Rich's work focuses on water issues ranging from recreation and sustainability to exploitation and abuse. Jeff explores these subjects by using long-term photographic documentations of very specific regions of the United States. Jeff received his M.F.A. in photography at the Savannah College of Art and Design in Savannah, Ga. His watershed project has toured nationally since 2012, with shows in New York City; Portland, Ore.; Asheville, N.C.; Bloomington, Ind.; Akron, Ohio, and Atlanta, Ga. His book, Watershed: A Survey of The French Broad River Basin was awarded the 2010 Critical Mass Book Award. His work has been featured on FlakPhoto, Prism Photography Magazine, and Daylight Magazine. In 2011 Jeff was named one of the winners of the Magenta Flash Forward Emerging Photographers Competition. Jeff Rich is an assistant professor at the University of Iowa, in the Department of Art and Art History. He also curates the weekly series "Eyes on the South" for Oxford American Magazine.

This program is also supported by the MidWest region of the Society for Photographic Education.
