Michiana Memories Website Launch Event February 3rd at IU South Bend Civil Rights Heritage Center

In May 2014, University Archivist and Associate Librarian, Alison Stankrauff, and Joe Sipocz, Manager of Local & Family History Services at the St. Joseph Public Library received a 2014 Indiana Memory Digitization Grant for their project proposal entitled, St. Joseph County African American History Collection.

As part of this project, the website Michiana Memories has been created and will debut on February 3, 2015 at a special launch event at the Civil Rights Heritage Center from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. Attendees will have a chance to use the website and enjoy community and academic presenters such as Ball State University's Dr. Nicole Etcheson speaking on Southern Indiana's soldiers of color during the Civil War. To learn more about the event, or to RSVP, visit <https://www.facebook.com/events/745810488842325/>.

Some of the items available on the website include Photographs from the Dr. Bernard Streets Collection, which includes photos from the 1880s until 1999 (click here for photographs: lifeguards and Bernard St Party), a nearly complete run of The Reformer, an African American newspaper printed 1967-1971, and historical documents and studies on race and housing in South Bend. The Michiana Memories collection will also be included in the Indiana Memory and Digital Public Library of America collections.

“By unifying these collections and making them accessible online, researchers, students, and the general public will be able to easily discover and delve into the history and impact of African Americans in our region,” said Dean of Library Services, Vicki Bloom.

To learn more about the Michiana Memories project, contact Alison Stankrauff at 547-520-4392 or astankra@iusb.edu
