3. INJUNCTION OF CONFIDENTIALITY. (a) Subject to subdivision (c), no Representative or other person may disclose, to any person not authorized to attend a given executive session, any information about any business that transpires, any communications presented, or any remarks made during that executive session, subject to the penalties described in Section 7. However, in relation to any roll-call vote that occurs during executive session, a Representative may disclose their own vote and the subject matter of the vote, but not the final result of the vote.

(b) Subject to subdivision (c) and except for the minutes of Congress, no written, audio, video, or other record shall be made or kept of any business that transpires, any communications presented, or any remarks made during executive session. Except the Recorder or Clerk in the conduct of their official duties, no Representative or any other person may make, authorize or allow to be made, keep, or authorize or allow to be kept any written, audio, video, or other record of proceedings that occur during executive session, subject to the penalties described in Section 7.

(c) Any minutes of executive session, the injunction of confidentiality over which has been lifted, shall be printed in the Journal in a separate section from the minutes of open session.

(d) A Representative is authorized to view all minutes of executive session. On request from a Representative, the Recorder shall permit the Representative to

JOURNAL OF THE IU STUDENT BODY CONGRESS

MINUTES OF EXECUTIVE SESSION

DECLASSIFIED BY ORDER OF CONGRESS

When Congress conducts business in executive, or closed-door, session, the doors of the chamber are shut, and only Members of Congress and other persons explicitly authorized by Congress to attend are permitted to be present.

Executive sessions are subject to an injunction of confidentiality. This means that an attendee, whether a Member or a non-Member, is strictly prohibited from disclosing any information about comments made or business conducted during executive session except to persons who are entitled to attend executive session. However, in relation to any vote that occurs during executive session, a Member is permitted to disclose their own vote (but not the result of the vote). An IUSG officeholder who violates the injunction of confidentiality is subject to disciplinary action by Congress.

Congress can loosen or lift an injunction of confidentiality at any time by two-thirds-majority vote. This section contains the minutes of business conducted in executive session, the injunction of confidentiality over which has been lifted by Congress. Minutes of any business that remains under an injunction of confidentiality are kept separately by the Recorder and may be accessed by Members of Congress or other persons expressly authorized by Congress to view such minutes.
