Theodore F. Wolff, art critic for The Christian Science Monitor, was the judge for the 1985 Whitewater Valley Annual Drawing, Painting and Printmaking Competition.

Born to missionary parents in Nicaragua, he earned both a bachelor's and master's degree in art and art history at the University of Wisconsin before moving to California to paint. He later moved to New York City where his work as an art appraiser evolved into his career as an art critic.

He began writing for The Christian Science Monitor in 1977 and became the staff art critic in 1980. With syndication, his column reaches approximately 27 million readers. He received the National Headliners Award for "Consistently Outstanding Special Column - Art" in 1982 and the "Art World Award for Distinguished Newspaper Art Criticism" in 1983.
