

IUB Main Library named for Herman B Wells

Indiana University on June 17 renamed its main library for its late chancellor, Herman B Wells. IU President Adam W. Herbert said it was the most appropriate way for the university to remember Wells.

“Chancellor Wells cared deeply about the IU library. He was its greatest champion. He knew of its power to transform our conception of ourselves and the world in which we live. He knew how first-rate research collections and a welcoming library environment enhance our ability to live the life of the mind,” Herbert said at a ceremony, attended by about 500 IU faculty, staff, students, and alumni, on the library’s south lawn.

“Chancellor Wells often said, ‘When you plan for the university, you should plan for a thousand years.’ Given his commitment to the institution’s progress, I think he would be pleased — and perhaps somewhat surprised — by recent developments in the library.”

When Wells took part in dedication ceremonies for the library building 35 years ago, it had a collection of 2.7 million books. Today, it holds 5 million of the university’s 7 million volumes, as well as an expansive collection of audiovisual and electronic resources, including the latest links to Web-based information.

“I am very confident that Chancellor Wells would be pleased to see that, even in this era when we have such vast amounts of information literally at our fingertips, the library remains a vital intellectual gathering place and the very heart and soul of the university,” Herbert said. “This fact would reaffirm the principles by which he led this great institution.”

Wells was president of IU from 1938 to 1962 and was university chancellor from 1962 to 2000. He led the university through its

Dean of Students Richard McKaig presented top award

Richard McKaig, vice chancellor for student affairs and dean of students at Indiana University Bloomington, has been awarded the 2005 Scott Goodnight Award for Outstanding Performance as a Dean by the National Association of Student Personnel Administrators.

The Goodnight Award is given to a dean who has demonstrated sustained professional service in student affairs work, high-level competency in administrative skills, innovative response in meeting students’ varied and emerging needs, effectiveness in developing junior staff members, and leadership in community and university affairs.

The award recipient also must have earned stature among and the support of students, faculty, and fellow administrators on his or her campus and made significant contributions to the field through publications or professional involvement.

“Dean McKaig is very deserving,” said Kenneth R.R. Gros Louis, senior vice president for academic affairs at IU and chancellor of the Bloomington campus. “He strikes the perfect balance between student advocacy and institutional responsibility. For as long as I have known him, he has been a strong advocate for student issues, a wonderful leader and a caring colleague. Dick does an outstanding job handling all types of situations that can arise from our very active and diverse student body.

“He has always handled difficult situations very well. He remains calm and reasoned. The most remarkable thing is his ability to stay fresh. Each semester he may be asked the same question he has answered 30 times before, but he always give a thoughtful response,” Gros Louis said. “He knows that for each student it is the first time they have asked the question.

“The students are lucky to have him in their corner, and IU is even more fortunate to have him at our service.”

McKaig, who came to IU in 1971, has served as vice chancellor, dean, and associate professor of education since 1991. The Office of the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs and Dean of Students at IU oversees the Division of Student Affairs. It provides broad support to individual students, student groups, parents, alumni, and other members of the Bloomington campus. Its involvement in campus life cuts across a wide range of issues, activities, and services, even as it coordinates policy, budget, and personnel matters for the student services area.

Quotes about McKaig from IU students:

- Sarah King, a former PanHellenic president: “Dean McKaig is an extraordinary student advocate. He is steadfast in his support

After-hours calling helps students reach Health Center fast

In fall 2003, the Parents Fund dedicated $18,000 of the total estimated cost of $40,000 for two semesters for a pilot program to help students reach the IU Health Center when it's closed. The Health Center covered the other $22,000. The after-hours call program was implemented in spring 2004, and, from January through May graduation, there were 996 calls. Beginning in the last week of August 2004 and ending the first week of January 2005, there were 1,912 calls.

Health Center medical providers take the calls for urgent medical information. They advise the student on methods of self-care for their condition and recommend their being seen at the center the next day. If patients need care immediately, they are advised to go to a non-appointment urgent care center or emergency room or call an ambulance. The service is not for prescription renewal. The after-hours call program phone number is (812) 355-8362.

During the first month of the pilot, a study was done in which the nurses called back the patients the following day to determine their status and their satisfaction with the service. This was discontinued after the first month because everyone who had called that month had high praise for the service and the information provided by the physicians or physician assistants and nurse practitioners.

The program was unanimously approved as a line-item budget increase ($40,000) for the 2005–06 fiscal year and approved by the University Fee Review Committee, dean of students, chancellor, president, and the board of trustees. This project is an example of the Parents Fund providing seed money for a pilot project and jump-starting a program that is now fully funded by the Health Center.

The after-hours call program operates Monday–Friday, 5–11 p.m., and weekends 8–11 p.m. The providers report that nearly 85 percent of callers can wait until the IUHC opens the following day, be given instructions on self-medication, or have a prescription called in to assist them in a speedy recovery. Immediately on completing the instructions to the patient, the IUHC provider will call the digital dictation system in the IUHC and dictate a note into the patient's medical record. This information will be available the next morning should the patient need to be seen at the center.

The financial savings to students and their families is significant when a base visit to the local Prompt Care starts at $98 without any lab or X-ray and will increase based on the acuity of the individual's condition and the time it takes for treatment. The insurance industry indicates that cost for the average patient served in an emergency room visit is several hundred dollars.

In addition to the health benefits to IU students, the financial advantages to our students and their families make this project a winner.

post-World War II expansion and is credited with transforming IU into an internationally recognized center of research and scholarship and one of America's great public universities. As university chancellor, he was active until his death at age 97 on the Bloomington campus, where he lived and was much beloved.

Collections at the IU Bloomington Libraries grew by more than 640 percent during his tenure as president. At the dedication ceremony for the Main Library in 1969, Wells said, "There is no distinguished university without a great library."

Other speakers at the 2005 ceremony included Kenneth R.R. Gros Louis, IU Bloomington chancellor and interim senior vice president for academic affairs; Suzanne E. Thorin, Ruth Lilly University Dean of university libraries; Curtis R. Simic, president and CEO of the IU Foundation; and Khalil N. AbuGharbieh, a Wells Scholar from South Bend.

Thorin remembered Wells also as a neighbor. In his final years, he lived across 10th street from the library, where he could see its limestone towers from his picture window.

"He regarded IU's libraries fondly," Thorin said. "When I knew Chancellor Wells, in his nineties, he was a regular visitor to the Lilly Library and loyally attended dinners for the Fine Arts Library. He celebrated the 30-year anniversary of this very building at a party we hosted in the library."

The university is seeking $28.4 million in the first phase of renovations to recreate a library that honors Wells's legacy and meets the needs of students and faculty. Plans call for transforming the south entrance to include additional services, adding an auditorium classroom and upgrading the infrastructure.

IU already has contributed more than $11.8 million from campus and private support to prepare for the renovation and has piloted concepts to demonstrate how a master architectural plan can be implemented successfully.

"Herman Wells would not want us to rest on our achievements," Thorin said. "This structure, which he built to house our prized book collections, must now be renovated completely both to repair the infrastructure and to accommodate the needs of today's faculty and students. Only then can we fulfill the potential of this library within this great public university."

The IU Libraries ranked 12th in the most recent survey of the nationwide Association of Research Libraries. As the largest and most visible entry point to a system of 20 libraries on the Bloomington campus, the Wells Library holds 5 million volumes, in addition to materials in other formats including journals, maps, and microforms.

for students, and he has proven himself to be a champion for student issues and concerns. He also is wholly committed to constant interaction with IU students. I cannot think of a time when he has declined an invitation to speak to or meet with a group of students. He is exceedingly deserving of any recognition that honors his commitment and service to students at Indiana University."

• Tyson Chastain, student body president: "This award shows the students of IU how fortunate we are to have a dean of students that represents us in all capacities. Dean McKaig is well-deserving of this honor because of his commitment to students academically, socially, and emotionally. We, the students of Indiana University, congratulate our dean for this achievement and look forward to working with him in the years to come."

Find scholarships, because they won't find you!

Sometimes parents ask, "My kid got a 4.0 at IU for her freshman year. Why doesn't IU give her a merit scholarship for next year?" Indeed, why doesn't IU simply hand out merit scholarships to students who perform well?

The answer is that sometimes we do and sometimes we don't. But for the most part, you can bet your bottom dollar that IU will not go looking for students who deserve merit awards; students have to go looking for the money themselves. And if they look hard enough, the rewards may very well be out there. So, where does an IU student find merit scholarships?

The College of Arts and Sciences at IU and the Kelley School of Business are but two of the undergraduate units that hold annual scholarship competitions for continuing students. The catch? You already have to be accepted as a major in one of the units when you apply, so students who are still enrolled through University Division will find that they do not qualify for those competitions. Also, no matter how generous our alumni and corporate friends are in funding awards, there is never enough money to go around to all of our deserving students — never — so competition even for small awards can be quite fierce. And here's yet another catch: In many cases, award money is limited to students who will be seniors (or in some cases, juniors) the following year — the group that has the longest academic records on campus. In some academic departments within each school, faculty members nominate students to receive small awards and in those cases, there is no application process open to students.

The IUF administers many donor-funded scholarships and every year it awards money to continuing students. In this case, the catch is the deadline. The application form is available online during the application period, which generally stretches from mid-December through early March.

In fact, that catch holds true for most scholarships at IU. Don't wait until June! The money has all been earmarked by then.

So, what do you do if you've missed all the deadlines? Or you've met the deadlines and eligibility requirements, but still not won a scholarship?

Services such as collegeboard.com and fastweb.com are good places to start. These two sites list myriad scholarship possibilities that winners can use to pay IU tuition. Continuing students can also apply for state and federal loans and grants. For help, information, forms, and deadlines, visit the IU Office of Student Financial Assistance.

Convenience, style just a click away

Why wait in lines when you could easily reserve textbooks online? That's right, the IU Bookstore eliminates the hassle of a new semester with a free textbook reservation system. Students can simply visit www.iubookstore.com and have books reserved in minutes. Students specify their preference for used or new books, along with which IU Bookstore location to pick up the books. The bookstore is conveniently located within the Indiana Memorial Union and in Eigenmann Hall (corner of 10th and Union streets.)

The bookstore staff will hand-select each book according to the student's specifications and have them ready and waiting at the beginning of the semester. The hard work is taken care of — all your student has to do is go to the IU Bookstore location of their choice and purchase the books in January. Sound easy? It is!

The IU Bookstore is also the official store for IU Varsity Shop apparel, the true Cream and Crimson clothing. IU Varsity Shop offers a wide selection of IU shirts, hats, jackets, warm-ups, and memorabilia for the entire family and is the official store of IU Athletics gear and apparel. Students can show their authentic Hoosier Pride with style when they sport IU Varsity Shop fashions.

Varsity Shop apparel is available at the IU Bookstore in the IMU, the IU Bookstore at Eigenmann, the Baseline Shop at the corner of Indiana and Kirkwood, and the Court Level Shop in Assembly Hall. IU Varsity Shop is also online at www.iu.hoosiers.com/varsityshop.

IU graduates tops at Teach for America

Every year, IU seniors apply for one of the most competitive and rewarding jobs possible for U.S. college graduates — positions with Teach for America, the national corps of outstanding recent college graduates of all academic majors who commit two years to teach in urban and rural public schools.

In 2005, a record 17,000 individuals from more than 300 U.S. colleges and universities applied to join TFA, including 120 Indiana University seniors. TFA offered positions to 25 IU seniors, with majors ranging from human biology to English, sociology to theater and drama. This 21 percent acceptance rate ranks significantly higher than the nationwide acceptance rate of around 15 percent.

Laura Nalley, Midwest recruitment director for TFA, says IU students are consistently successful. "This is a dynamic group that is ready to face challenges with a wonderful attitude.

Their approach is 'What can I do to make the world better?' I've been extremely impressed with the qualities that students at IU possess. They are able to think critically, they communicate and interact beautifully with others, and they are exciting, socially engaged students who want to make a difference."

TFA looks for students who will be successful teachers in urban and rural areas — those who operate as a successful leader would in any context. The TFA selection model is built around internal studies of the skills, experiences, approaches, and characteristics that are common to corps members who lead their students to dramatic academic gains. This research has revealed a set of principles that TFA calls "Teaching as Leadership."

All 25 IU graduates accepted the TFA offer and are starting to teach this fall in schools from New Orleans to New York City.

Going to the source: Division of Student Affairs tells it like it is

The Division of Student Affairs supports the academic mission of the university through student advocacy, services, and programs that promote the general welfare of students and foster a campus climate conducive to learning and responsible citizenship. The primary goals of the division are intended to provide opportunities for personal development, foster respect for diversity, encourage physical and emotional wellness among students, protect student rights, and promote ethical behavior. Listed here are the offices and services that comprise the Division of Student Affairs.

Office of the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs and Dean of Students

Franklin Hall 108, (812) 855-8187,
askthedean@indiana.edu,
dsa.indiana.edu

The chief student affairs office for the Bloomington campus, it oversees all activities and services of the Division of Student Affairs and is responsible for a broad range of student issues affecting the campus and surrounding community. The staff members work directly with students, families, faculty, other administrators, and members of the general public to resolve concerns and encourage a campus environment conducive to academic and personal success. The office is available to provide assistance to new students and their families in many ways.

Alcohol-Drug Information Center

705 East 7th St., (812) 855-5414, adic@indiana.edu,
dsa.indiana.edu/adic/html

This is the main information and resource center on alcohol and other drugs for the IUB community. On campus since 1982, the ADIC serves a diverse population — students, staff, and faculty — with special emphasis on students. Our goal is to help people prevent or respond to alcohol and other drug misuse through information, education, and referral.

Career Development Center

625 North Jordan Avenue, (812) 855-5234,
iucareer@indiana.edu,
http://indiana.edu/~career

The Career Development Center offers a wide array of career planning services to IUB students. Services include career counseling, self-assessment, internships, career courses, career fairs and workshops, and job listings.

Visit us on campus, across from the Herman B Wells Library and the IU Health Center.

Disability Services for Students

Franklin Hall 096, (812) 855-7578,
dss@indiana.edu, indiana.edu/dss.html

The Office of Disability Services for Students will assist students with disabilities at Indiana University Bloomington to receive appropriate and reasonable academic supports and auxiliary aids.

IU Health Center

600 N. Jordan Ave., (812) 855-4011, indiana.edu/~health

The Indiana University Health Center is a full-service ambulatory medical and psychological facility. The center houses the medical clinic, counseling and psychological services, wellness center, and the sexual assault crisis service.

The Health Center is located in the center of campus and has free patient parking adjacent to the building. The Health Center features a comprehensive medical clinic with board-certified physicians, certified nurse practitioners, and physician assistants. The clinical staff is supported by a full-service pharmacy, laboratory, X-ray, physical therapy, immunization and travel clinic, emergency care, and a non-appointment walk-in clinic. These services are available from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. The Health Center is fully accredited by Accreditation Association for Ambulatory Health Care Inc. The director of the Health Center can be reached at (812) 855-6511 if you should have any problems or concerns regarding the Health Center.

IUB Parents Association

Franklin Hall 108, (812) 855-8187 or (812) 856-1626, dsa.indiana.edu/parents.html

The IUB Parents Association is an organization for the parents, partners, and family members of Indiana University students on the Bloomington campus that serves to bridge the gap between parents and the Bloomington campus community. The association is a joint venture sponsored by the IU Foundation's Parents Annual Fund, the IU Alumni Association, and the Division of Student Affairs/Dean of Students Office. The purposes of the IUB Parents Association are to inform parents of IU's programs, facilities, services, needs, and campus calendar; to sponsor programs and events for parents to better acquaint them with IU and to serve as a liaison between parents and the university community. A Parents Association advisory board is appointed by the dean of students to assist us in guiding the activities of the association. Parents of all IU undergraduate students on the Bloomington campus are automatically members of the association when their student son or daughter registers for classes at IUB. The association's newsletter, Campus Life, is published in the fall and spring semesters with a circulation of 27,000 and is mailed to parents worldwide, informing them of campus services, activities and programs, and important calendar items and telephone

For more information contact Suzanne Phillips, assistant dean of students, by phone or e-mail at philli@indiana.edu or at mykidis@indiana.edu.

Student Activities Office

Indiana Memorial Union, Room 371,
(812) 855-4311, sao@indiana.edu,
indiana.edu/~sao

A college education does not begin or end at the classroom door. Education and learning occur in all aspects of college life. The Student Activities Office at Indiana University strives to be a teacher of students as they become involved in student organizations and campus life. The office creates educationally purposeful activities that will facilitate the development of the whole person. The staff is dedicated to learning, involvement, diversity, fairness, and availability for all students. More than 300 student organizations are listed with the office, ranging from fraternities to ethnic interest groups to political activism to club sports to service organizations.

Student Advocates Office

Franklin Hall 206, (812) 855-0761,
advocate@indiana.edu,
dsa.indiana.edu/adv.html

The Student Advocates Office assists students to solve problems they encounter on campus by providing individual attention to each issue. The advocates are retired IU faculty members and administrators who work as volunteers and serve as IU experts on the students' behalf. Students can expect to find a caring individual who is not only a good listener but a seasoned university expert. The advocate will provide students with a neutral point of view and information about the university. Advocates deal with concerns relating to any aspect of student life on campus, from academic to financial to charges of personal misconduct.

Student Ethics and Anti-Harassment Programs

705 E. 7th St., (812) 855-5419,
reportit@indiana.edu,
dsa.indiana.edu/ethics.html or indiana.edu/%7Ecomu/

Issues associated with students' rights and responsibilities, as identified in the Code of Student Rights, Responsibilities, and Conduct, are the primary focus of the Office of Student Ethics and Anti-Harassment Programs.

Campus judicial procedures are administered under the oversight of this office, and students' disciplinary records are maintained here. The office serves as a liaison between the Division of Student Affairs and campus groups that address student issues, such as multicultural understanding. The Commission on Multicultural Understanding is administered through the office, as are two teams for responding to reports of harassment based on sexual orientation, race, religion, or national origin. Another unit within this office is the Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender Student Support Services.

Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender Support Services

705 E. 7th St., (812) 855-4252, glbtserv@indiana.edu, iub.edu/~glbt/

The GLBT Office is a resource center for the entire university community, supplying educational resources on GLBT issues and offering information, support, and referral for GLBT individuals.

Student Legal Services

703 E. 7th St., (812) 855-7867, stulegal@indiana.edu, indiana.edu/~sls/

The Student Legal Services is a law office with two goals: client service for students and clinical education experience for second- and third-year law students. Law student interns work under the supervision of experienced attorneys. Frequent areas addressed include landlord/tenant disputes, consumer problems, debt counseling, employment issues, automobile accidents, and contracts. We give advice to, but do not represent, students who have been charged with a criminal offense. For students who have paid the student activity fee, there is no direct charge for service. If a claim is litigated, the student will have to pay the filing fee and other minimal costs. Students can access the Web site and fill out an intake sheet detailing their problem. They will then be contacted to set up an appointment.

Veterans Affairs Office

Franklin Hall 108, (812) 855-8187,
vets@indiana.edu,
www.dsa.indiana.edu/vet.html

This office provides enrollment certification and advising for students receiving benefits, such as the GI Bill, and coordinates tutorial assistance for students receiving benefits under various GI Bill chapters.

2005 Dance Marathon dedicated to student

Last year, IU Dance Marathon raised more than $468,000 for Riley Hospital for Children. This year's Marathon, to be held on Oct. 28-30, is dedicated to the memory of Ashley Crouse (standing, at left, with a former Riley Hospital patient at the 2004 Dance Marathon). Ashley was killed in an automobile accident in April. IU Dance Marathon, along with Riley Hospital for Children, was her passion. The Department of Spanish and Portuguese is establishing a scholarship in her memory. Crouse was a double major in Spanish and political science.

Uslan comics collection to be exhibited

“Comic books are contemporary American folklore,” says Michael Uslan, executive producer of the recent hit movie Batman Begins.

It’s the same argument he used in the 1970s when, as a junior at IU Bloomington, he persuaded the College of Arts and Sciences and the Department of Folklore to approve his idea for a college course on the history of American comic books. Uslan taught the course, which was believed to be the first for-credit college course on the subject in America.

A class about comics may not seem so strange today, but at the time it was such an unusual innovation that it got national publicity. Some found it exciting and intriguing; others equated it with the fall of civilization.

Uslan went on to earn an undergraduate degree in history and a master’s degree in education from IU, and then graduated from the IU School of Law. His career since then included work as a comic book writer and entertainment lawyer, before he realized a lifelong dream and acquired the movie rights to the Batman character from DC Comics. Uslan was producer of the 1989 film, Batman, starring Michael Keaton and Jack Nicholson, as well as several subsequent movies based on Batman and other comic book characters.

Recently, Michael Uslan donated about 30,000 comics from his personal collection to Indiana University’s Lilly Library. A selection from this collection will be on exhibit there from Sept. 12 through December. During the week of Sept. 12, Uslan will visit the Bloomington campus, giving a public talk and visiting classes.

Students can see their way to good vision

Many college students experience eye strain from increased study loads and computer usage. Eye strain can result in headaches or difficulties with concentration and studying. Faculty at the IU School of Optometry work with individuals experiencing these and other visual problems that effect college performance. Other vision problems, such as incorrect contact or glasses prescriptions can also lead to poor college performance. These problems can be detected by our faculty using their research expertise and the latest vision analysis technology.

The School of Optometry provides full-scope vision care at two Bloomington clinics. Care is provided for students and their families, as well as for the general public, under the supervision of a world-renowned faculty. Complete vision exams are performed to determine vision function, evaluate for contact lenses, and provide spectacle prescriptions. In case of a vision-related emergency, a doctor is on call 24 hours a day and can be reached by calling the clinic number.

The school conducts research on new contact lens technologies for contact lens companies. This allows the contact lens service to fit the newest advances in contact lens technology. These new technologies encompass standard soft and gas-permeable lenses, extended-wear lenses, cosmetic lenses, and specialty lenses. The clinic also provides follow-up care for patients currently wearing lenses.

In addition to these services, the Eye Wear Centers’ selections of eyewear are among the finest in the state, including the latest designer eyewear and a wide assortment of sunglasses. Our inhouse ophthalmic lab can provide most prescriptions within a day or two.

For students with children, the pediatric service provides eye exams for infants and children. Infants’ eyes should be examined by the age of six months to detect problems that can be potentially devastating if not corrected early.

It is easy to make an appointment in our clinics by calling the Atwater Eye Care Center, located in the Optometry Building at 800 East Atwater on the south side of campus, at (812) 855-8436 or the Community Eye Care Center, at 803 North Monroe St. on the west side of Bloomington, at (812) 855-1671. Students can charge services and products to their bursar’s account. More information is available at www.opt.indiana.edu.

Kinsey Institute is a resource for many

The Kinsey Institute for Research in Sex, Gender, and Reproduction has been in the spotlight this past year, with a movie, a documentary, a novel, and countless articles about pioneering sex researcher Alfred Kinsey. What isn’t so well known is the research focus today on sexual health and behavior, and the services the institute provides for students on the Bloomington campus, the institute’s home for the past 58 years.

Though the Kinsey Institute is primarily engaged in research for a scientific understanding of sexuality and in providing resources for scholars through its world-renowned library and art collections, it also reaches out to students.

KISISS, the Kinsey Institute Sexuality Information Service for Students, is a Web-based service that answers students’ academic, informational, and personal questions about sexual behavior and sexual health. Unlike much of the information on the Web, the information provided is accurate and research-based.

IU students can also tour the institute with their residence hall or class or conduct their own scholarly research in the library.

Parents and friends are invited to visit too. Call (812) 855-7686 to set up a tour of the art and library collections. To learn more, go to www.kinseyinstitute.org and www.indiana.edu/~kisiss.

IT is essential to student success

Computers are essential to college life, both in and out of the classroom. Most IUB instructors integrate IT into their courses. Students have grown up in the information technology age; computers have always been a part of their lives. Students use IT at IU to complete schoolwork, communicate with professors, register for classes, and pay bursar bills. According to University Information Technology Services’ 2005 User Survey, 97 percent of IUB students have a computer.

Dorm residents have in-room access to IU’s high-speed network. The wireless network is available to all students throughout campus. Students may also use Windows and Macintosh computers in the Student Technology Centers.

The Information Commons, IU’s state-of-

Cars are on campus, but buses are better

It may be an overstatement to say that you can't live without a car on the Bloomington campus, but there are definitely many students who find it difficult to live with their car on campus. For some students a car is a necessity and for other students a car is simply a convenience, but everyone who operates a car on campus comes into contact with Parking Operations. Others simply take the bus.

During a 12-month period, PO will register about 8,000 student cars. Student schedules vary greatly, but with more than 10,000 student spaces there is a place for everyone, even if they all arrive on campus at the same time.

So, with excess spaces available, why would anyone suggest that there is a parking problem on campus? The real issue is not the availability of empty spaces; it is actually an issue of convenience. Although empty spaces are always available on campus, everyone would prefer to park next to the front door of their destination. As the most convenient spaces are taken, the remaining spaces become less desirable, until a driver will finally give up and ignore a space that is considered to be too inconvenient.

Student spaces on campus are zoned as D or E spaces. The D spaces are located adjacent to the residence halls. The E spaces are primarily located north of 17th Street, around the athletics complex. Off-campus students usually park on the west side of Memorial Stadium, where they can catch a shuttlebus that will take them to the center of campus.

Other parking options include the four campus parking garages or the Indiana Memorial Union pay lots, which are not recommended for regular student parking because of the cost. Campus parking garages do provide an important safety feature for students who are on campus at night. Any properly registered vehicle, including all student permits, may park in any campus parking garage free after 5 p.m. The garage locations are close to many popular academic areas.

For students who find a car to be a necessity, here are simple tips that will make car ownership less stressful and less expensive:

- Familiarize yourself with the parking regulations and the parking areas. It is difficult to plead ignorance more than once.
- Purchase a comfortable pair of shoes. The Bloomington campus is considered a pedestrian campus, and the quickest way between two points is usually on foot.
- Use your alarm clock. Being late is a common excuse for students who pay the hourly fee in the parking garages or are tempted to park illegally.
- Use the campus bus. The bus system is designed to compliment the parking system.

Parking information is available online at www.parking.indiana.edu or by calling (812) 855-9848. The parking manager can be reached at porterjd@indiana.edu or at (812) 855-9168. With the correct information (and some comfortable shoes), operating a car on campus doesn't have to be a burden.

classroom, and the Adaptive Technology Center. The ATC provides services for students with physical and learning disabilities.

When students have a problem with technology, the UITs Support Center is available 24 hours a day. Anyone may search the IU knowledge base for answers to their technology questions at <http://kb.iu.edu>. Students can get free, personalized assistance from consultants by phone at (812) 855-6789 or e-mail at ithelp@iu.edu. Students using Windows computers may log in to <http://ithelp.live.iu.edu> to "chat" with a live consultant. With the student's permission, ITHelpLive consultants can run software diagnostics and execute remote support tools. Students may visit a Support Center location for a brief face-to-face consultation. Carry-in services (such as virus recovery) and extended consultations are available for a fee. UITs Call Center operators are available 24/7/365 at (812) 855-IUIU

There and back again

Campus Bus

When your student needs a quick, hassle-free ride to class or to the local mall, the campus bus service is a convenient alternative to walking or driving. Students do not need to purchase a bus pass to ride, they simply need to show their student ID. Campus bus service operates weekdays 7:30 a.m. to midnight, Saturdays 8:40 a.m. to 11:30 p.m., and Sunday 10:30 a.m. to 11:30 p.m.

Bus Routes

There are six different routes, seven days a week! Check out the bus map at www.iubus.indiana.edu

Express Route

This special shuttle route offers direct nonstop service between the IU Stadium and the Indiana Memorial Union. Check out the detailed schedule online at www.iubus.indiana.edu.

Midnight Shuttle

Students out and about on the weekends can use the Midnight Special bus shuttle that runs every Thursday, Friday, and Saturday 11 p.m. to 4 a.m. when classes are in session. All three routes start at the IMU campus bus shelter and run approximately every 20 minutes. This shuttle is free to students — all they need is their student ID to access the service. The bus stops at all regular campus bus stops and at intersections in the downtown area.

IT is essential

the-art student technology center, provides more than 250 workstations for individual work or group collaboration. The IC also hosts a multimedia production lab, an IT training to provide directory assistance, directions to campus buildings, information on athletic or entertainment events, and much more.

Because technology changes rapidly, IT training workshops are free for students and cover more than 80 IT topics. IU negotiates agreements with vendors to provide the latest hardware, software, and wireless phone deals at reduced prices.

Encourage your student to take advantage of IU's IT resources and use them responsibly. To review security and policy guidelines regarding IT rights and responsibilities or to learn more about the resources listed in this article, contact the UITs Support Center at <http://uits.iu.edu>, (812) 855-6789, or ithelp@iu.edu.

SAA activities are highpoints on campus calendar

The Student Alumni Association is the student's first line of defense against flagging spirits as the academic year progresses. The student organization has activities to combat study fatigue, pep up school spirit, and show Hoosier pride. Plus, parents have a chance to participate in some of the fun!

Student Alumni Association membership and Finals Survival Kit

Membership includes a member discount card with yearlong savings at more than 18 area retailers; an SAA T-shirt; invitations to pregame parties and monthly meetings; eligibility for prizes in our monthly drawings; opportunities to network with IU alumni; and inclusion in one of the most prominent student programs on campus.

Best of all, your student will receive a Finals Survival Kit the week before finals. Order kits for both fall and spring semester and get the SAA membership for only $45! A kit for one semester and SAA membership is $30.

Delivery: Students receive their discount card in the mail and instructions to come by the SAA office to pick up their T-shirt. SAA volunteers assemble the kits and deliver them to residence halls and Greek houses the week before finals. Students living off-campus are notified to pick up their kit at the DeVault Alumni Center.

All proceeds benefit student leadership programs through the Student Alumni Association. Order today at www.indiana.edu/~saa or (800) 824-3044.

IU License Plate Program

The IU collegiate license plate provides a great opportunity to support IU and show your Hoosier pride. The purchase of each IU plate includes a $25 tax-deductible contribution to Indiana University through the IU Alumni Association, which helps provide scholarships to IU students. This year, 24 $1,000 scholarships will be awarded. The IU license plate is available to all Indiana residents directly from the Bureau of Motor Vehicles. Just stop by your local license branch and ask for the IU collegiate license plate.

Overseas study advisers guide students

When students step into the Office of Overseas Study for the first time, they need not feel overwhelmed. From choosing a program to planning classes to take abroad, a study abroad adviser helps every step of the way. “Whether students are looking for a short-term program or an academic-year program, we work with them to find a program that best matches their academic, personal, and financial needs,” says assistant director Paige Weting. “The early advising stage is just the beginning of a longer relationship that develops as students have frequent contact with our office before, during, and after their study abroad experience.”

Prior to applying to a program, students should stop by the Overseas Study Information Center, in Franklin Hall 303, where peer counselors, former study abroad participants, can help answer questions about programs and applications. Advisers hold walk-in hours from 10 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 4 p.m. to provide further assistance. Advisers are also available for appointments regarding program selection, eligibility issues, and how courses abroad fit with degree requirements.

After students have applied and been accepted to a program (notification is approximately three weeks after the application deadline), they meet with their major adviser to review degree requirements and plan what courses to take abroad. Then students make an appointment with the adviser who oversees their program in order to review course selection and make further recommendations.

Advisers facilitate predeparture orientations shortly after students meet with them. Here, they cover a range of topics from culture shock to health and safety, and former participants tell about their experience. Students are able to meet other program participants and clarify any last-minute questions.

While students are abroad, advisers help keep them informed of campus events by sending them a monthly e-mail newsletter. Students should pay particular attention to instructions for class registration for the following semester.

Even after students step off the plane with their time spent abroad behind them, advisers are open to hear all about what was probably a life-changing experience.

For more information, check out the Web site at www.indiana.edu/~overseas.

Entertainment is part of IU excitement

Research shows that the more a student actively engages in college activities, the better the college experience. Students at IU have a wide variety of entertainment and arts events at their fingertips, and one of the best places for students to seek this entertainment is the IU Auditorium.

Give your IU student the cultural experience of a lifetime — a chance to enjoy a diverse offering of live entertainment at its best. IU Auditorium, located at the heart of the IU Bloomington campus, is proud to present an award-winning line-up of exciting shows for the upcoming season!

For more than 60 years, the IU Auditorium has continued to play its part in enriching the IU experience for students, faculty, and members of the IU community. IU Auditorium is pleased to offer specially discounted prices for students, up to 50 percent off regular prices to every show! This season's shows have everything students want and need to round out their entertainment schedule and their education. The auditorium has hosted a collection of the world's top performers, ranging from legendary classical musicians, Broadway musicals, and dance troupes to famed rock musicians and celebrated comedians.

Here's a look at just a few of the 2005–06 season highlights. For a complete list of the 2005–06 shows, visit IUAuditorium.com.

Blast!

Oct. 7–9, 2005

International sensation Blast! returns to its original stomping grounds. Combining 37 brass, percussion, and visual performers in a unique explosion of music and theater, Blast! evolved from the showmanship of outdoor pageantry found right here in Indiana. The show began in Bloomington as an outgrowth of the Star of Indiana drum and bugle corps. Winner of the 2001 Tony® Award for Best Theatrical Event and a 2001 Emmy Award for Best Choreography, Blast! should not be missed!

Chicago

Jan. 31–Feb. 1, 2006

This lively musical (upon which the 2002 Academy Award-winning movie was based) follows the lives of fame-hungry murderers Velma Kelly and Roxie Hart, who find themselves on death row together. With the help of slick lawyer Billy Flynn, they vie for publicity — and public sympathy — while avoiding the gallows in 1920s Chicago. This rousing show features such Broadway classics as “All That Jazz,” “Funny Honey,” and “Razzle Dazzle.”

Tap Dogs

March 22, 2006

Heads will spin at Tap Dogs, an irreverent industrial revolution of tap. This howling success of a show combines the athleticism and power of workmen with the precision and talent of tap dancing. Featuring six guys, a construction site set, and a driving score, Tap Dogs is leaving dents in stages all across North America. If you liked the noise and energy of Stomp, you'll love Tap Dogs, an award-winning show that leaves tongues wagging wherever it plays!

Mamma Mia!

April 11–16, 2006

A mother. A daughter. Three possible dads. A trip down the aisle you'll never forget! And the best part? The entire story is told through the songs of '70s super-group ABBA. More than 20 million people have fallen in love with the characters, the story, and the music that make Mamma Mia! the ultimate feel-good show! ABBA's timeless songs propel this enchanting tale of love, laughter, and friendship. Hits like “Dancing Queen,” “The Winner Takes It All,” “Knowing Me, Knowing You,” and “Take a Chance on Me” combine to give you a near-perfect theater experience.

Encourage your student to take advantage of the first-class entertainment at the IU Auditorium this year and bill the tickets to their bursar account, or surprise them with a gift certificate to the IU Auditorium. Gift certificates allow your student the flexibility of purchasing tickets to any of the auditorium's events. Certificates are issued in denomina-

Nov. 4 – 6

Friday, Nov. 4

Wylie House Tour, 10 a.m.–2 p.m., 317 E. Second St.

Take a tour of one of Bloomington's oldest surviving structures. Wylie House, built in 1835 by IU's first president, Andrew Wylie, is now operated as a historic museum. The home is furnished in period antiques, including some significant Wylie family artifacts. Gardeners will be interested in the heirloom plants grown on site. Call (812) 855-6224 for more information.

Lilly Library Tour, 4 p.m., East Seventh Street

The Lilly Library, IU's rare book and manuscript library, has more than 400,000 rare books and 7,000,000 manuscripts. The exhibitions currently include selections from the comic book collection of Michael E. Uslan and highlights from the library's collections, such as the first printing of the Declaration of Independence, the New Testament of the Gutenberg Bible, an Oscar won by director John Ford, the elephant folio of Audubon's Birds of America, and the Shakespeare First Folio. Library hours are Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Saturday, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Herman B Wells Library, corner of North Jordan Avenue & East 10th Street

Twenty-first-century college students access information in ways that 20th century students could never have imagined. The Information Commons in the west tower of the Main Library, opened in September 2003, is what the IUB Libraries have always been: information-rich, comfortable, and welcoming, but now technologically enhanced with more than 250 computers that provide access to a wide range of resources. It's a place where students collaborate, learn, and create 24/7. Stop in any time to see how the IUB Libraries and University Information Technology Services have collaborated to transform information access, research, and learning.

Division of Recreational Sports SRSC and HPER Tours, Informal tours, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., Friday to Sunday, SRSC lobby and HPER Wildermuth Gymnasium

Tour and work out at one of the country's leading campus recreational sports facilities. The 204,000 square-foot Student Recreational Sports Center, built at a cost of $22.5 million, has been one of the most active places on campus since its doors opened in July 1995. SRSC highlights include the Counsilman/Billingsley Aquatic Center, three multisport gymnasiums, an elevated running track, and a strength and conditioning room equipped with more than 400 pieces of cardiovascular and weight-training equipment. At the School of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation Building, explore the historic Wildermuth Gymnasium, visit the Royer Pool where legendary Olympic champion Mark Spitz trained, or take a walk around Woodlawn Field and the sprawling tennis courts. Parents accompanied by a son or daughter who is enrolled at IUB may use the facilities free this weekend. Valid student ID is required. Siblings can purchase a day pass. Age policies apply. SRSC is open Friday, 6 a.m.–9 p.m.; Saturday, 8 a.m.–9 p.m.; and Sunday, 8 a.m.–11:30 p.m. HPER is open Friday, 11 a.m.–9 p.m.; Saturday, 8 a.m.–9 p.m.; and Sunday 8 a.m.–11:30 p.m. Visit www.recsports.indiana.edu for details.

Kinsey Institute Tour, 3 p.m., 313 Morrison Hall

Established in 1947 by Dr. Alfred Kinsey, the Kinsey Institute for Research in Sex, Gender, and Reproduction currently holds the original interview data, more than 7,000 original works of art, 75,000 photographic images dating from 1880 to the present, and artifacts from 2,000 years of history. The library holds nearly 90,000 books, journals, and magazines. Tours include an overview of current research and a walk through the library and art gallery. For more information, visit www.kinseyinstitute.org. Tour size is limited. Call (812) 855-7686 to reserve space.

Helene G. Simon Hillel Center 730 E. Third St., (812) 336-3824, e-mail hillel@indiana.edu

Shabbat services and dinner. Shabbat observance begins at 6 p.m., with Reform, Reconstructionist, Conservative, and Orthodox services. A homemade Shabbat dinner is served, following services, at 7 p.m. Dinner is free. Call for reservations; walk-ins are welcome.

*Friday Dinner Buffet, 6–8:30 p.m., Tudor Room, Indiana Memorial Union

No weekend visit to IUB is complete without a visit to the Tudor Room. Located on the first floor of the IMU, the Tudor Room provides a formal or casual dining atmosphere. Advance reservations are strongly encouraged and can be made by calling (812) 855-9866.

*Volleyball: Indiana vs. Penn State, 7 p.m., University Gymnasium, East 10th Street & 46 Bypass

The Hoosiers and the Nittany Lions square off in a Big Ten battle. IU volleyball is a fun and affordable event for the whole family. Tickets are $5 for adults, $3 youth, and IU students are free with student ID. Tickets are available at the door.

*Men's Basketball: IU vs. St. Joseph's (exhibition game) time TBA, Assembly Hall

For more information about IU sports, check out www.IUHoosiers.com.

Men's and Women's Swimming and Diving vs. Louisville, Southern Illinois, and Wisconsin, 1 p.m., Counsilman Billingsley Aquatic Center, corner of Jordan and Law.

Come see the Hoosier men and women in what is expected to be a great four-way meet. Free admission.

Saturday, Nov. 5

Academic Open Houses/Tours, 9–11 a.m.

Attend an academic open house hosted by one of IU's nationally renowned schools or the Herman B Wells Library. Academic open houses may include refreshments, tours, sample classes, panel discussions, and a dean's presentation. Each program will vary, and all sessions are free of charge. All sessions begin at 9 a.m. unless otherwise noted.

- School of Education, Wendell Wright Education Building atrium. "Call to Teach" program begins at 9:30 a.m., featuring Indiana's 2005 Teacher of the Year. Enjoy free refreshments. Everyone welcome.

- Kelley School of Business, Hall of Honors, second floor, 9–10:30 a.m. Dean Dan Smith will speak at 10 a.m.

Parents as Mentors: Role Changes That Promote College Success, Neal-Marshall Culture Center, Grand Hall, 10 a.m. to noon 275 N. Jordan Ave., (812) 855-9271, e-mail nmbcc@indiana.edu

Bob Vantine, director of the Office of Strategic Mentoring, will present a workshop for parents, who often wonder how to support their daughter or son's academic success when their student is so many miles away from home. Come and learn some effective mentoring tips that will smooth the way for supporting and encouraging your student's success in making the most of his or her college years. Specific and concrete examples will be cited, and the role of "mentor" will be discussed. Followed by a Q&A session.

Parents Association Hospitality Tent,

**Memorial Stadium, two hours prior to kickoff
All parents are invited to join us for a pre-game gathering under a tent on the east side of the stadium. Look for our Parents Association sign. All IU parents and families are invited. Enjoy complimentary refreshments and visit with campus officials and Parents Association board members.

Big Red Warm-up, two hours prior to kickoff, Virgil T. DeVault Alumni Center, 1000 E. 17th St.

Stop by and tour the IU Alumni Association's home across from Assembly Hall. With refreshments, music, and plenty of Hoosier spirit, it's a winning combination!

*Football: IU vs. Minnesota, Memorial Stadium, 1 p.m. (time subject to change)

Come out and cheer the Hoosiers as they take on the Minnesota Gophers at Memorial Stadium. There is nothing better than spending a Saturday afternoon with your family and attending a Big Ten football game. Tickets are $35 each and can be purchased by calling the IU Athletics ticket office at 866-IUSPORTS or (812) 855-4006. Check www.iuhoosiers.com for more information on athletic events.

Guides are available for a tour of the IU Art Museum, which is ranked among the foremost university art museums in the country. Three floors of the permanent collection house the arts of Western civilization, Asia, Africa, the Pacific Islands, and the ancient Americas. Museum hours during the weekend are Friday and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday, noon to 5 p.m.

*Volleyball: Indiana vs. Ohio State, 7 p.m., University Gymnasium, Tenth & 46 Bypass

The Hoosiers and the Buckeyes square off in a Big Ten battle. IU volleyball is a fun and affordable event for the whole family. Tickets are $5 for adults, $3 youth, and IU Students are free with their student ID. Tickets are available at the door.

Sunday, Nov. 6

*Sunday Morning Brunch, 10:30 a.m.–2 p.m., Tudor Room, Indiana Memorial Union

No weekend visit to IUB is complete without brunch at the Tudor Room. Located on the first floor of the IMU, the Tudor Room provides a formal or casual dining atmosphere. Advance reservations are strongly encouraged and can be made by calling (812) 855-1620.

IU Art Museum Tour, 2–3 p.m., East Seventh Street

Guides are available for a tour of the IU Art Museum, which is ranked among the foremost university art museums in the country. Three floors of the permanent collection house the arts of Western civilization, Asia, Africa, the Pacific Islands, and the ancient Americas. Museum hours during the weekend are Friday and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday, noon to 5 p.m.

\ Indicates charge for admission.*

\* Time subject to change. In the event of a change in the starting time of the IU vs. Minnesota football game, most events will begin two hours prior to kickoff.*

Careers: What's a parent to do?

You are the biggest fan and supporter of your child. You want your child to reach his or her full potential. At the Indiana University Career Development Center, our mission is to help students achieve their full potential, and we believe parents are an integral part of the career planning process.

When we counsel students on career planning, students often discuss the impact their parents have on their career planning. What help do students want from their parents?

- Support: College students go through cycles of independence and dependence. Discuss career options, but realize your son or daughter should make the ultimate decision about his or her career goals.

- Information: Some students fear career planning because they think it will lock them into a certain career direction and limit their options. Parents can discuss how career planning actually offers students more time to explore their career options. Direct students to resources such as the Career Development Center.

- Personal insights: Believe it or not, studies have shown that parents are the greatest influence on students' career planning — because they often know more about their child's work values, interests, abilities, and skills than anyone else. Parents should make a commitment to periodically discuss career planning with their son or daughter.

- Contacts: Parents should not only explain their own career planning to their son or daughter, but, if possible, they should also provide contacts for jobs, internships, and shadow opportunities.

- Motivation: There is nothing wrong with a student's being unsure about career direction. The problem is procrastination. Career planning should start the first year at IU, not the senior year. Parents should show an interest in becoming involved in their child's career planning. A simple step is to ask your son or daughter if they have been to the Career Development Center and what thoughts they have given to careers.

Experience a must for long-term success

For today's college student, long-term success is rarely an accident. It takes planning and a willingness to reach out for opportunities that will sharpen professional skills and allow the student to approach the world of work with more confidence. Students are assuming more responsibility for the cost of their college education. Through services provided at IU's Career Development Center and Arts and Sciences Career Services, students are finding internships and part-time employment opportunities that meet financial challenges and broaden their knowledge of the world of work.

The Career Development Center lists job vacancies on a year-round basis. Work-study and non-work-study positions are made available to students at www.indiana.edu/~career. Every August, the center begins listing a wide variety of part-time opportunities on campus and in the Bloomington community. Later that month, the center sponsors the annual Fall Student Jobs Fair, hosting more than 100 employers looking to fill part-time positions both on and off campus. Held in the Indiana Memorial Union Alumni Hall, more than 2,500 students attend this event throughout the day.

In addition to part-time employment, students need to participate in one or more internship experiences during their time at IU. In today's world, internships are an integral component of a student's overall college experience and can open the door to the world of professional work.

Internships are short-term work experiences with intentional learning goals. They involve special project work combined with general duties and often present the opportunity to interact with supervisors in a mentoring relationship. Internships may range from four weeks to more than a semester in length and can be full or part time. Internships develop professional skills and allow firsthand insight into a career field or organization.

The staff at the Career Development Center and Arts and Sciences Career Services actively support all IU students in their pursuit of internship experiences in a wide range of career fields and locations. The center also offers on-campus recruiting, computerized internship listings from all over the world, a two-credit-hour course (Q400 Job Search Strategies for Liberal Arts Students), and seven career fairs throughout the semester.

For more information, contact Jan Nickless, associate director, Career Development Center and Arts and Sciences Career Services, (812) 855-1556, or jnickles@indiana.edu.

Checklist for Successful Career Development

- Appreciate how important you and your positive attitude are to your child's view of the future.
- Support learning, encourage hard work, and be an example of someone committed to excellence.
- Discuss the types of careers available within a particular major or discipline.
- Discuss career options and how job choices affect the future.
- Encourage your child to become involved in campus organizations and community service.
- Support networking and internship training so students can explore fields of interest.
- Discuss interviewing, thinking like an employer, and how to communicate skills and experiences clearly.
- Talk about managing money and how spending money is related to the time required to earn it. Discuss how much compensation is required for your child to maintain an adequate standard of living.
- Provide introductions and networking opportunities to professionals within your child's fields of interest. Discuss the types of skills needed to excel within a career field.
- Don't panic; be willing to advise your child to wait for the right opportunity in his or her field of choice.
- Don't let the career or graduate school search overwhelm your child; plan a search strategy.
- Make an investment in the basic applicable attire needed for a successful job search (e.g., suit, shoes, etc.)
- Encourage your son or daughter to take a career course with the Career Development Center, such as Q294 or Q400, or in their academic department.
- Encourage your child to take advantage of opportunities available at the Career Development Center. Check out the center's site at www.indiana.edu/~career/.

Letter from the director

A warm welcome to the family members of our entering freshmen, and I hope you and your students find your IU experience challenging, rewarding, and full of good surprises. To those of you who have made it through your student's first year, congratulations! I know you're looking forward to this fall semester.

College life is full of "a-ha!" moments that direct students to their path or help define their course. As an IU parent, you watch your student encounter academic and social challenges and achieve success in the classroom, in the recital halls, and on the playing fields. Your sons and daughters establish valuable friendships and mentoring relationships that last a lifetime.

Private contributions from parents enhance each student's experience and help support educational enrichment outside the classroom — from renowned visiting scholars who lecture and participate in a special speaker series, to expanding the on-call medical staff at the student health center, to conducting research with a professor, to participating in any of the more than 450 student organizations on campus.

Like most parents, you've probably already been involved in many kinds of fund-raising activities during your student's school years. Maybe your school sold fruit or cookies — and who can forget wrapping paper! Now, as an IU parent, you'll again have a chance to help with fund raising, but this time it will be much easier than peddling chocolate bars door-to-door. All you have to do is decide on an amount that is right for your family and participate. Every gift, regardless of size, is

parents FUND

INDIANA UNIVERSITY

"Mom and Dad, please send money!"

This time it isn't your own student asking. A current IU student will be asking the same question through an upcoming phone campaign on behalf of the Parents Fund this fall. Student callers will ask you for more than cash for pizza and clothes. Each year, parents of IU students have the opportunity to support the critical programs and services that help every student. In the past, contributions to the Parents Fund have supported such programs as the Career Development Center, Drug and Alcohol Awareness, Disabled Student Services, Health Center After-hours Nurse On-Call Program, Undergraduate Library, Multimedia Center, Need-based Scholarships, Undergraduate Research Programs, Student Ethics and Student Advocates, Indiana Memorial Union, and "Late Night" Programming. The Parents Fund provides student services that wouldn't exist otherwise. Make your gift today by using the attached form. Thank you.

important. The strength of the Parents Fund lies in numbers.

As Parents Fund donors, you can observe your financial support flowing into scholarship and leadership opportunities for your child and for all IU students, as they take important steps toward meaningful careers in the world.

You've contributed so much already by sending IU the best and the brightest students. Your gifts to the Parents Fund help the Bloomington campus continue to advance our work: to create a training ground for future leaders in business, government, and the professions. The success of IU graduates through the years is a measure of the outstanding results of generous parental giving.

How can you participate? By making a financial contribution. There are three easy ways to do that: You may charge your gift using Visa, MasterCard, or American Express. You may return the reply form, at left, along with your personal check. Or you may want to speak with an IU student who will call and ask you to make a gift to the Parents Fund later this fall. However you choose to take part, your gift is appreciated.

Faculty approves religious holidays policy

To ensure freedom of religious observance throughout our increasingly diverse population, a set of calendar principles has been put in place. This policy requires instructors to make reasonable accommodation when a student must miss an exam or other academic exercise because of a required religious observance. A procedure is outlined for students requesting an accommodation. For more information, go to www.iub.edu/~deanfac/holidays.html.

Safety tips

- Use available prevention mechanisms such as lighted walkways, locks, security doors, public transportation, and friends.
- Avoid being out alone at night. Go with a friend, use the bus or taxi, or call the Safety Escort Department at 855-SAFE.
- Be aware of your surroundings. Avoid dark or hazardous areas.
- Let someone know where you are and when you will be leaving or arriving.
- Use campus buildings during high-use times.
- Be alert. Walk confidently and pay attention to who is around you.
- Report suspicious incidents and suspicious persons to police immediately. Be as accurate and complete as possible in your descriptions.
- Lock your doors — your home or apartment door, your residence hall door, your car doors.
- Don't let someone you don't know into your room, your home, or your car.
- Learn to communicate and listen effectively. People may interpret the same information differently. Question if you are not sure.
- Remember, alcohol and drugs make it difficult to think clearly and communicate adequately.
- If you are a victim of a violent crime, seek help. Advocacy, medical care, and legal assistance are available.

Academic advisers are key resource

Academic advisers are a key resource for students, helping them transform and grow, both personally and professionally. Using the Kelley School academic advisers as an example, these highly educated professional staff wear numerous hats and have specialized expertise in a number of areas, in addition to providing guidance to students. For example, the Business Undergraduate Program has dedicated advisers for international students, as well as for special programs, including the Mitte Business Honors Program, the Direct Admit Program, Kelley Emerging Leaders Program, and Study Abroad Program. Having a dedicated professional on staff to assist and advise students who study abroad has successfully enabled one-quarter of Kelley students to have this unique educational experience.

If students need someone to talk to about a problem — whether personal or academic in nature — an adviser is there and ready to help. Adviser meetings can be a scheduled appointment, a “walk-in” or unscheduled appointment, an e-mail conversation, or a phone call. Advisers are a built-in support mechanism in the undergraduate program, and students recognize the value of their services. Surveys from students show that they rate these meetings consistently high with 4.69 (where 5 is the highest rating) for the “overall evaluation of the adviser.”

The advisers’ skill-sets are broad and diverse; all have at least a master’s degree and share the mission of educating students in the process of managing their academic affairs. Advisers help teach students how to be academically responsible. Jim Murray, associate director of the undergraduate program and manager of a team of 10 Kelley School academic advisers, states their function simply “as providing mentoring and guidance, trying to treat students as they would want their own children to be treated.” He adds, “It is very important that the student make the choice and understand the responsibility that follows.”

Advisers sometimes find that students are upset about a personal matter, such as a family illness or relationship mishap. Advisers act as supportive individuals, providing clear options to assist students where needed.

Business advisers continually work on their professional development and education, assisting the school with various programs and diversity initiatives, which helps them grow and thrive in their roles. Staff members regularly attend and present sessions at National Academic Advising Association conferences. “We believe in the empowerment gained through education” Murray says, “for both our students and our staff.”

24-hour refill request service available

The IU Health Center Pharmacy is open Monday–Friday, 8 a.m.–4:30 p.m. In an effort to be more efficient, the IUHC implemented a new “Voice Tech” automated prescription refill system. Students may call in a request for refills on existing prescriptions at any time of the day or night. The prescription will be waiting for them at 8 a.m. the next business day.

The new Voice Tech system allows greater flexibility for the patient. Cheryl Thomas, chief pharmacist, noted, “If you think of your prescription refill at midnight, now you can call it in. You don’t have to wait until we’re open.”

The number for the new automated service, which parallels those at the chain pharmacies, is (812) 855-3865. By following the options and including their phone and prescription numbers, students will have their order filled and ready for pickup during normal operating hours of the next business day.

If you have questions about this or any other service of the IUHC, please call the director, Dr. Hugh Jessop, at (812) 855-6511.

Connecting students to the career world

The Career Development Center and Arts and Sciences Career Services has an exciting event series planned for the coming academic year that will connect students with professionals in the world of work and help them begin to strategize their career goals.

The series, called Networking Nights, will feature guest speakers from a wide variety of career paths who will share their expertise and wisdom about finding that first job and connecting “what you do well” with a career plan.

Open to all IU students, each event will give them an opportunity to sharpen their communication skills as we teach them the art of professional networking. Guest presenters will include IU alumni, as well as local and national industry professionals who are eager to share their time and expertise with students.

Whether your student is a freshman looking for ways to connect academics to careers or a soon-to-graduate senior on the actual job hunt, Networking Nights are sure to be fun and informative. A total of 12 events will be offered this fall and spring semester. To maximize individual contact with our special guest, space will be limited to approximately 30 students per event. Notifications will be sent to all students via e-mail, and announcements will be made in classes and in the Indiana Daily Student starting this fall.

Encourage your students to participate in this series and take a proactive role in their career development. Some of the exciting careers fields we will showcase are information technology, life sciences, social services, government, international, hospitality/tourism/event planning, law enforcement, security/intelligence, marketing/public relations, arts and entertainment, and financial. If you have an idea or career field to share, we welcome your suggestions.

Note: Parents who are interested in participating as a guest presenter at one of these events should contact Caroline Dowd-Higgins at cdowd@indiana.edu for more information.
