The Secret Life of Paper

Please join the Herron Art Library, the IUPUI University Library, and the Herron School of Art + Design as we kick off the new academic school year with an exciting presentation from papermaking artist Helen Hiebert in a lecture titled "The Secret Life of Paper". It will be held Monday, August 26 with a reception at 4:30pm and the lecture at 6:00pm. The reception and presentation will be held at the Herron Art Library (which is inside the Herron School of Art + Design located at 735 W. New York Street in Indianapolis). Please RSVP to ulibert@iupui.edu. Helen is a Colorado artist who constructs installations, sculptures, films, artists books' and works in paper using handmade paper as her primary medium. As a lecturer and author of several books, Helen holds an annual paper retreat in her Red Cliff studio each September. To learn more about Helen go to www.helenhiebertstudio.com.

IU Kokomo One-Day Interdisciplinary Symposium

Mindfulness, Media, & Misinformation in the Digital Era
Friday, September 13, 2019
Kokomo, Indiana

Keynote speaker: Michael Caulfield, Director of Blended and Networked Learning, Washington State University, and author of Web Literacy for Student Fact-Checkers

"Falsehood is the essence of all media, extending mankind's natural inclination to myth-making." – Marshall McLuhan

This symposium seeks to bring together a diverse group of scholars, teachers, and thinkers from around the state of Indiana and beyond to discuss pedagogical strategies and solutions to help today's college students cope with "network propaganda" of all kinds. In an increasingly complex, fast-moving, and confusing digital media environment rife with problematic information (mis- and disinformation, propaganda, so-called "fake news," pseudo-science, manipulation, etc.), what are our responsibilities as teachers and literacy advocates? Join us to discuss how to reconceptualize our roles against a societal backdrop of declining trust in professions and institutions.

Registration is free and required so that we may plan lunch and refreshment breaks for attendees. Please complete the registration form at 3MSymposium2019 by August 27, 2019. Registration is limited and may close prior to the deadline if registrations reach the 150 attendee limit before that date.

Information about lodging, travel directions, and the IU Kokomo campus may be found on the Symposium LibGuide.

Questions? Please feel free to email the conference organizers (Paul Cook and Polly Boruff-Jones) at cfp19@iuk.edu

Week 4: Small Movements, Big Results

Along with working around 30 minutes of walking into your day (like we talked about in last week's BTL), it's vital that you take a few moments for yourself each hour to move. Get up and take a 2-3 minute walk! Look away from your computer screen. Do some light stretching.

Looking for ideas? Check out these 8 movements that you can do anywhere. You can even keep track! (And complete the survey to receive an incentive.) Working these in (even just one per hour) can protect your back and body from getting sore after sitting all day. If you'd like to see a video presentation that demonstrates the movements, check out this video recording of them:

Tip of the Week
Did you know walking to and from Jimmy Johns instead of ordering it with delivery could save you from 100-200 calories and $3-4 in delivery with tip each time you order from them for lunch?

Ursula Romero Accepts Position

We are happy to announce that Ursula Romero has accepted the position of Jay Information Literacy Librarian at the Lilly Library, beginning September 3. This two-year visiting position will work with the Lilly Library Public Services department to provide instruction and reference services related to information literacy, digital collections, and the IU Libraries' Primary Source Immersion Program. Ursula received a BA in Media Studies from William Patterson University and an MLS with an Advanced Certificate in Archives from the Pratt Institute. She is currently a Library Assistant at Florham Park Public Library and has previously completed internships at the Thomas J. Watson Library (Metropolitan Museum of Art) and the Oskar Diethem Library (Cornell University).

This position is made possible by the Jay Information Literacy Fund. Hilda Jay and her daughter, Ellen, are Indiana University graduates who established the fund in 2014. Hilda and Ellen made the gift so that faculty members and librarians could collaborate in an effort to integrate information literacy into courses and curriculum. In addition to underwriting the visiting librarian, the fund has generated more than 25 course grants, three curriculum grants and supported three Primary Sources Immersion Program (PSIP) Workshops. Ellen was also instrumental in the Libraries' $25,000 IU Foundation Women's Philanthropy Leadership Council grant to launch the Critical Thinking Online Toolkit.

Please join us in welcoming Ursula to the Lilly Library and IU Libraries!
