Night at the Pacers will benefit overseas studies at IU Kokomo

KOKOMO, Ind. — Basketball fans can help Indiana University Kokomo students study overseas, while watching the Indiana Pacers take on the Detroit Pistons.

The IU Kokomo Alumni Association and the School of Nursing are co-sponsoring a Night at the Pacers on Friday, February 22, at Bankers Life Fieldhouse, Indianapolis. Tickets are $25.14, and a portion of each ticket sold using the IU Kokomo passcode will be used for international program scholarships.

Assistant Dean Lynda Narwold said international study is becoming more and more important, but can be hard for students to fund.

“This event helps us build up our international scholarship fund, to make it possible for more students to travel overseas,” she said. “We believe students in all majors benefit from international travel experiences. In nursing, we really try to focus on how cultural differences impact health care, so our students are prepared to treat patients from all over the world.”

Tickets must be purchased by Friday, February 8, at www.pacersgroups.com/tickets/1089, using the passcode IUK. Each ticket includes a lower balcony seat, a voucher for a hot dog, chips, and a drink, a T-shirt, and a 10 percent discount in the Home Court Gift Shop. Twenty lucky fans will also be chosen to high five the Detroit Pistons players during the game.

Those attending are invited to a social hour from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. in Pacers Square, inside the field house. There will be snacks and a cash bar available during this time. Tipoff is at 7 p.m.

Indiana University Kokomo serves north central Indiana.
