Available Now: Spring 2015 Issue of InULA Notes

The newest issue of InULA Notes is now available via IUScholarWorks Journals.

Are you curious what InULA has been up to this year? InULA President Latrice Booker tells you all about highlights from this year. In fact, highlights could be the theme of this issue: Andrea Baer provides an overview of the new ACRL Framework for Information Literacy; Ashley Ahlbrand – with the much-appreciated contributions of several library leaders across the campuses – highlights the many ways library space is being transformed to better suit our patron's needs; Richard Humphrey illuminates the changes to IUPUI's Third Year Review process; and Michelle Trumbo shines a spotlight on the artwork found throughout the Jerome Hall Law Library. Don't miss the inspiring essays from the two winners of InULA's Julieann V. Nilson Scholarship, Alessandro Meregaglia and Sarah McElroy Mitchell. Finally, read up on the interesting work two of your colleagues – Andrew Asher and Catherine Lemmer – have been conducting with the financial aid of InULA's Research Incentive Fund grants.

Thank you to all authors who have contributed to this issue, and to the hard-working members of this year's Communications Committee: Anne Haines, Julie Hardesty, Wendell Johning, Courtney McDonald, Michelle Trumbo, and Christina Sheley, our board liaison.

InULA Notes Vol. 27, No. 1 is available at <http://scholarworks.iu.edu/journals/index.php/inula/>.

Happy reading!

Fourth Annual Indiana University Libraries Information Literacy Colloquium

Friday, August 7, 2015

Indiana University Kokomo, Kokomo, Indiana

Audience: Academic Librarians

What Does It All Mean?: Unpacking the Information Literacy Framework

The discussions around the development of an Information Literacy Framework have enlivened the library instruction community and challenged us to consider new possibilities for defining, teaching, and assessing information literacy on college and university campuses. With our horizons broadened and our perspectives enlightened, we are beginning to ask "Now What?" of a framework that may exist alongside the Information Literacy Standards, may stand on its own, or may become the theoretical and inspirational driving force for librarians in our role as educators for the foreseeable future. In addition to questioning its viability for being the guiding force that drives information literacy in higher education, librarians are developing and adopting new modes and practices regarding its implementation. The planning committee for this event would like to provide a forum for open discussions and working sessions related to the practical application of the framework. We also welcome critical investigations into the usefulness of the framework within particular institutional contexts. Instead of formal presentations and a keynote speech, the IU Libraries Information Literacy Colloquium will feature workshops designed to engage participants in question-raising,

Staff News

Thomas Bullard Retires

Thomas Bullard officially retired from the Libraries May 8, 2015. Thomas worked for the Libraries for longer than 37 years as an Auxiliary Library Facility Internal Processing Assistant. He has made plans to catch up on sleep, eating all his favorite foods, and completing only his most pressing projects. Let us celebrate his transition in life and wish him the best if you see him around town.

Mark Notess

It is with mixed emotions that I announce that Mark Notess, Head of User Experience and Digital Media Services in Library Technologies, will be leaving the IU Libraries on May 29 to take a position with Cognizant in Knoxville, Tennessee. Mark first joined IU in 2001 as user experience specialist on the Variations digital music library project, and from there moved on to become manager of the Variations development team, serving similar roles on several other projects, including Sakaibrary, and eventually moving into his current role. Over the past several years, Mark has been integral to the success of the IU Libraries' collaboration with Northwestern University on the Avalon Media System project and grants that the Libraries have received from IMLS and the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, and his departure will certainly be felt by many here. In his new position, Mark will be working as a user experience manager as part of Cognizant's contract with Scripps Network Interactive. A major draw for moving to Knoxville is the fact that Mark and his wife will be closer to several of their grandchildren. Please join me in thanking Mark for his contributions here at IU and congratulating him on his new job.
