

Take Five

This Week in Academic Affairs

If you're like me, you enjoy interacting with students outside the classroom as much as teaching them in the classroom. This week's Campus Community Walk, part of our 70th Anniversary celebration, is a great opportunity for this kind of interaction (which research suggests leads to positive outcomes for students). I hope to see many of you there.

Journal will showcase student work

By Rachel Blumenthal

Field: A Journal of Arts & Science, a new peer-reviewed journal, will showcase the pinnacle of campus intellectual life by publishing research, creative writing, and visual art produced by IU Kokomo students. Our inaugural issue is due out in spring 2016.

About Field: Sophisticated. Vibrant. Innovative. Field will inspire intellectual dialogue across academic fields. It shares the work of emerging collegiate scholars with the community and region. What new idea waits just outside your field of vision? Secure your copy of IU Kokomo's first volume of Field to find out.

Please encourage your students to submit work to Field. They may email their submissions to Dr. Rachel A. Blumenthal (rablumen@iuk.edu). Field welcomes research papers (long- and short-form), critical essays, poetry, fiction, creative non-fiction, art, and design.

If your students are interested in joining a dynamic community of student editors and scholars on the Editorial Board, please share this information with them. They may enroll in the 1-credit internship (ENG L-498) offered this spring. We are conducting interviews for editorial teams. Contact Dr. Blumenthal (rablumen@iuk.edu) for details. Spaces are limited so get in touch soon.

Tara Kingsley, assistant professor of education, has received an IU Teaching with Canvas Pioneer Award.

Kudos for Kokomojo

- Julie Kendall has stepped up to be a tremendous help to Erin Doss in her new role as director of the Honors Program, going well beyond the call of duty. Thanks, Julie!
- Kristen Snoddy has volunteered to serve as an academic resource to our athletes. They're lucky to have you, Kristen!
