The Bloomington Faculty Council affirms the principle that students and faculty are engaged in the academic mission of the university throughout the work week, and that every day of that week is important to furthering each student's academic and career goals. The faculty and students of Indiana University Bloomington will continue to work together on various educational activities that advance these goals.

The Bloomington Faculty Council directs appropriate campus-level administrative offices to monitor annually the amount of instructional and educational activities occurring in the schools and departments on each day of the work week.
