New from the DLP: Image Collections Online

We are pleased to announce the launch of Image Collections Online, a service of the IU Digital Library Program.

Formerly known as the Photos Service, Image Collections Online provides support to collection managers in creating digital collections of images, and a website for displaying and searching those collections.

<http://www.dlib.indiana.edu/collections/images>

Image Collections Online currently includes historical photographs from the IU Liberian Collections, images of cultural objects and images from the Lilly Library at IU Bloomington, and photos of items from the Sage Collection in the Department of Apparel Merchandising and Interior Design. As the site grows we will be adding new collections from throughout the Indiana University community and integrating a number of existing IU online image collections into the site.

If you are interested in finding out more about making image collections available through this service, please contact the Digital Library Program at diglib@indiana.edu.

Your Help Needed: Test the New IUCAT Interface [Testing Period Extended]

We need YOU to help test the new interface for IUCAT! Please help us by taking a few minutes to participate in the initial staff testing phase of this project – we've extended the testing period through Friday, February 24. We welcome feedback from all staff, including student employees.

Find information on the project to implement the new interface, powered by Blacklight, and specifics on testing here: <https://blogs.libraries.iub.edu/ole/iucat-beta/> (password: Blacklight)

Questions? Contact iucat@indiana.edu.
