Advancing With a Clear Vision

Dean Lauren Robel, JD'83

I am delighted once again to have the opportunity to thank all of you for the incredible role you play in the continuing success of Indiana University School of Law—Bloomington. Your time, expertise, and donations are absolutely critical to the School. Each year, the Dean's Report recognizes our alumni and friends who demonstrate their commitment to the School by making a financial investment.

Each and every dollar directly improves the quality of the educational experience for our students and faculty. And each donation enables the School to fulfill the vision set forth in the Strategic Plan: “to be a highly visible and influential law school whose faculty, students, and graduates advance knowledge, justice, and the public good in the state, in the nation, and in the world.”

PILF student volunteers construct a Habitat for Humanity home in Bloomington. The organization is the School's largest student group.

In this issue, we are proud to report the many ways the Law School, through your generosity, advances the public good. Indiana Law has a proud tradition of promoting public interest work and a keen understanding of the needs of students who wish to pursue careers in the area.

A renewed dedication to clinical education and externships offers students the opportunity to learn valuable practical skills while aiding community members who cannot afford private legal representation. The Public Interest Law Foundation (PILF), which raises funds for public interest summer fellowships, provides sound evidence of this commitment as the School's largest student organization.

Our faculty members engage in pro bono representation of individual clients and organizations. They present and plan internationally-attended conferences and symposia, and through a breadth of centers and projects, they are engaged in targeted, innovative research and outreach. This reach spans the globe. I witnessed our scholarship and legal knowledge at work in Liberia last spring and returned with an even stronger confidence in the work of new programs such as the Center for Constitutional Democracy in Plural Societies (CCDPS). Over the summer, PILF and other students joined this effort by traveling to Burma and Liberia with the CCDPS to aid in their mission of constitutional reform.

Richard Lazarus of Georgetown University Law Center spoke in September in honor of the Conservation Law Center opening.

These endeavors are critical to our strategic goals, and private support is crucial in achieving our vision. Unrestricted dollars support every aspect of the Law School and give us the flexibility to host conferences on timely issues, invest in projects and centers, and promote our faculty's groundbreaking scholarship.

In this Dean's Report, you will also read the stories of donors who have helped us advance the public good on a more personal level. They are establishing scholarships, supporting clinics, and leaving bequests that establish loan repayment assistance programs for graduates who want to practice public interest law.

The most exciting donor story this year is undoubtedly that of Gene Shreve, Richard S. Melvin Professor of Law (see page 9). Professor Shreve has honored the Law School by announcing a $1 million planned gift tailored to meet the needs of students pursuing careers in public service. And the impact of Shreve's gift will be doubled; IU's "Matching the Promise" program doubles funds for this gift in perpetuity.

I cannot express how grateful the School is that one of our own has made such a significant commitment to our future students. This is truly a transformative gift that will further assure Shreve's legacy as a teacher, mentor, and public servant at the Law School.

I am also delighted to announce a $400,000 gift from the Balfour Foundation, which supports our Family and Children Mediation Clinic, our Community Legal Clinic, and minority scholarships (see page 5).

Your annual support in this area is critical as we seek foundation and grant funding for clinics and research centers. A high level of annual alumni participation in the Fund for Excellence demonstrates your faith in the institution, and it gives our external supporters confidence in our success.

Even as we celebrated the changes that have energized the Law School, we said goodbye this year to two graduates who gave significant parts of their lives to public service. Judge Jesse E. Eschbach II, JD'49, passed away in October 2005. He spent 38 years on the federal bench, first as a district court judge in the Northern District of Indiana, and then on the 7th Circuit Court of Appeals. I was fortunate to have clerked for Judge Eschbach after graduating from Law School, and I know I speak for my fellow clerks — many of them Indiana Law alumni — when I express my deepest admiration for him. He was truly an outstanding judge, mentor, and teacher.

Judge S. Hugh Dillin, JD'38, passed away in March 2006 at the age of 91. Judge Dillin was appointed to the Southern District of Indiana by President John F. Kennedy in 1961 and served as trial judge until he stopped taking cases at the age of 87. He presided over the desegregation of public schools in Indianapolis and was known for his no-nonsense style in the courtroom. Judge Dillin established a scholarship at the Law School, and we are deeply grateful to his friends, family, and colleagues, who have made memorial gifts. His legacy will live on at the Law School in myriad ways.

Again, on behalf of the Indiana Law community, I extend my sincere gratitude to all of you for the many ways in which you support the School. Your support makes possible the progress we have made in implementing the Strategic Plan. I hope to see many of you in the coming year so that I can thank you in person.

All my best,

Lauren K. Robel, JD'83

Building a Foundation of Support

On behalf of the Arthur M. Lotz Office of Alumni & Development, thank you for your contribution to the success of the Law School as it makes progress toward achieving the objectives of the Strategic Plan. Your generous donations in the 2005-2006 fiscal year totaled more than $2 million. The School received more than $1 million in current-use gifts, up from $765,000 in the previous fiscal year. These gifts fund the scholarships, chairs and professorships, conferences, centers and clinics, and student programs that enable the School to realize its vision.

This year, the Fund for Excellence grew by four percent and raised nearly $820,000 in gifts of $25,000 and below. Our alumni participation rate remained strong at 22 percent, which compares very favorably with our peers in the Big Ten. Our healthy level of alumni support also helped the School immeasurably in our efforts to secure funding from foundations and corporations for research centers and other strategic initiatives. Every gift, no matter its size, is extremely important and has tremendous impact.

As always, we thank the alumni volunteers who make the Fund for Excellence successful each year. Special congratulations are in order for Don Dorfman, Class Agent for the Class of 1957, who achieved an unprecedented 55 percent class participation. Bud Hillis, Class of 1952, came in for a close second with more than 52 percent involvement.

The Class of 1961 and Class Agent Gene McGarvey raised the most money this year, with results totaling $42,684.65. We are also particularly pleased with the results from the Class of 2004, the first class to engage in a class pledge campaign. Only one year into their campaign, the class members raised $7,000 from their pledges.

Our Law Firm and Corporate representatives also showed tremendous dedication this year. Nine firms — Beckman Kelly & Smith, Bose McKinney & Evans, DeLaney & DeLaney, Jenner & Block, Krieg DeVault, Procter & Gamble, Sidley

Austin Brown & Wood, Stuart & Branigin, and Yoder Ainlay Ulmer & Buckingham — boasted 100 percent alumni participation. The top firms for dollars raised were Baker & Daniels, Barnes & Thornburg, Bose McKinney & Evans, Ice Miller, Jones Day, and Mayer Brown Rowe & Maw. Many thanks to volunteers from these organizations who worked with their colleagues to support the Fund for Excellence.

Don Dorfman, JD'57, inspired his class to reach an amazing 55 percent participation in Fund for Excellence contributions.

Every gift acknowledged in this Dean's Report is critical to the School's Strategic Plan. In this report, we have focused on how your donations assist the School in fulfilling our vision to advance the public good in our communities. Indiana Law has a long tradition of promoting the public good through access to education, clinical outreach, and many other opportunities. Your generosity ensures that the School can continue to offer the programs that contribute invaluable to the community.

Thank you again for your sustained support of the Law School.

Director of Annual Giving

Advancing Our Vision

In April 2005, the Law School adopted a strategic plan that focuses our thinking and resources on increasing the School's visibility and influence in the global legal market. An intrinsic feature of the Strategic Plan is the application of specific actions and indicators that enable us to define and measure progress toward our goals and vision for Indiana Law. We are pleased now to report the accomplishments of the first year of implementing the Strategic Plan.

Visible and influential scholarship

A primary objective of the Strategic Plan is to encourage our faculty to widen their scholarship audiences by publishing original, important scholarship in influential venues. We are delighted to report that from May to December 2005, our 40 full-time, tenure-track faculty produced 11 books, 34 articles, 26 book chapters, and 20 book reviews and other scholarly work.

In addition, Indiana Law was featured prominently in the media this year, enjoying 135 hits in publications ranging from the New York Times to CBS News to People Magazine.

The School hosted four major conferences last year, which brought scholars from Duke, Emory, Georgetown, Northwestern, Texas, and Yale law schools to Bloomington. This increased visibility of our faculty and their research has certainly contributed to a considerable rise in the Law School's reputation among judges and practicing lawyers, as measured by the 2005 U.S. News & World Report rankings.

An enriched intellectual community

The Law School is also dedicated to enriching its intellectual community by hiring and retaining driven faculty members who are — or will be — leaders in legal scholarship. These hires ensure the School's academic progress. This fall, Donna Nagy, a nationally recognized expert in securities litigation, joined us as the C. Ben Dutton Professor of Law upon Bill Hicks's recent retirement. Experienced clinician Carwina Weng adds her expertise to the clinical program. She will develop and direct the Disability Law Clinic to join the expanding clinical program.

We are delighted to welcome Professors Nagy and Weng to our community. There is still work to be done in this area, however. The Law School lost a promising entry-level candidate to Vanderbilt this year.

Collaborative research and teaching

The strategic planning process illuminated the strengths and opportunities available to Indiana Law because we are part of one of the nation's premier research institutions. This year, we are capitalizing on these opportunities by creating and encouraging new avenues for interdisciplinary and collaborative research and teaching, particularly in cooperation with other schools and centers on the Bloomington campus.

Further cementing our relationship with the Kelley School of Business, the Law School established one of only two three-year JD/MBA programs in the U.S. and an innovative Entrepreneurship Law Clinic as its capstone course. In September, the School celebrated the opening of a new Conservation Law Center and Clinic, a valuable resource and experience for joint JD/MSES and JD/MPA students with the School of Public and Environmental Affairs.

In keeping with a commitment to international outreach, Professors David and Susan Williams continue their work with the Center for Constitutional Democracy in Plural Societies, an international center they founded that is now working in several countries. This is one example of the Law School's vital connection to a campus-wide strategic emphasis on internationalization and globalization.

A particularly exciting indicator of progress on our interdisciplinary efforts has been our success in applying for outside funding. Last year, our faculty received more than $4.8 million in grants for cutting-edge programs.

Alumni and our goals

The Strategic Plan has energized the Law School community, and we are very proud of our progress to date. Our alumni serve a critical role in our efforts to expand the audience for our faculty's scholarship and in identifying sources for external funding.

We look forward to reporting to you each year as we rely on the achievements and support of our distinguished alumni. Much work is yet to be done, and there are many more areas of opportunity for the School. Together, we can achieve our vision of becoming a law school whose constituents play vital roles in advancing the public good globally and domestically.

Alumni board members fill one of many volunteer roles that are vital to advancing the School.

Champion for the Community

An impressive grant bolsters minority scholarships and two essential clinical offerings

The Law School recently received a generous $400,000 grant from the L.G. Balfour Foundation to support the Family and Children Mediation Clinic, the Community Legal Clinic, and minority scholarships. The Indiana Law community is deeply honored to be a favored charity of the Balfour Foundation, whose grant supports projects at the School that are incredibly important to our mission.

Lloyd G. Balfour, a 1907 graduate, was a model entrepreneur and philanthropist. After a brief career in law, he began selling fraternity and sorority jewelry and enjoyed it so much that he decided to start the Balfour Company — a venture that, at its peak, employed 2,700 people and whose sales exceeded $50 million annually. The business's success mirrors Balfour's philanthropic spirit which provides a model for charitable giving.

Following his death in 1973, the company was sold, and the L.G. Balfour Foundation was established. The Foundation seeks to make education more accessible to underserved communities. Since the Foundation was established, it has provided grants totaling $80 million.

Indiana Law in action

Gifts such as the Balfour grant further the Law School's passion for service and dedication to instilling public values in the next generation of legal scholars and professionals.

Minority scholarships invite the finest students to enhance the diversity and breadth of experience of our student body. Support for the Family and Children Mediation Clinic and the Community Legal Clinic, two programs devoted to public interest and family law, strengthens the unprecedented growth of our clinical program.

Through the Family and Children Mediation Clinic, the School provides mediation services for low-income families in our community. Our student mediators, who have an ethical obligation to focus parents on the best interests of their children, provide a valuable service to the community as certified mediators.

“Mediation is the present and the future of litigation, and to be familiar with the process is to have a leg up,” says Laura Ginn, a third-year clinic student. “The experience really opens your eyes to the world and how law affects every person. Working for and with the community gave me an added incentive to really do my best.”

Second- and third-year students involved in the Community Legal Clinic provide legal representation to clients under the supervision of a licensed supervising attorney. This clinic functions as a law firm whose clients are local residents. Many — if not all — have limited incomes that prevent private legal counsel.

Due in large part to private support such as the Balfour Foundation grant, Indiana competes with some of the nation's top clinical programs. The Law School deeply appreciates the generosity that has enabled our clinical program to expand to a total of 17 innovative courses, projects, and programs over the past two years. Our students continue to complete important research and work on real cases, while new faculty and clinics are strengthening an innovative program. Your continued support can take us even higher.

Indiana Law's Clinical Program

Continued investment in our clinical offerings can help Indiana Law progress as a top-notch public law school. Now, in addition to the storied Community Legal Clinic and Federal Courts Clinic, our clinical program includes:

Conservation Law Clinic

Students gain experience in research, advocacy, traditional litigation, legislative drafting, regulatory proceedings, and the broader application of environmental law, with a focus on conservation law issues.

Disability Law Clinic

Developed by recent hire Carwina Weng, this clinic will assist low-income clients in administrative law hearings concerning social security disability benefits.

Elder Law Clinic

Students provide legal assistance on civil matters to clients over the age of 60.

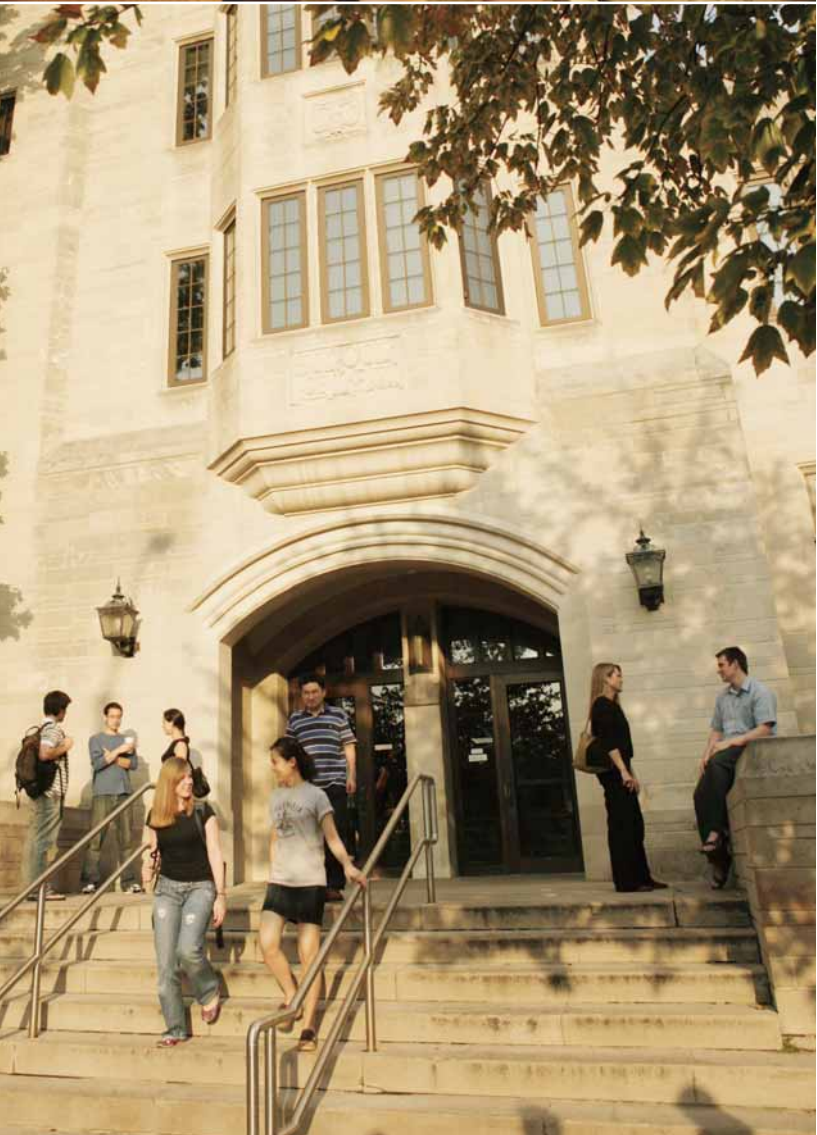

Entrepreneurship Law Clinic

This joint venture with the Kelley School of Business gives students hands-on experience assisting start-up, high-growth ventures with legal issues including financial planning, organization, licenses, agreements, regulatory and zoning compliance, and intellectual property matters.

Family and Children Mediation Clinic

As a combined six-credit course and clinical experience, this clinic certifies students as licensed mediators. Students work through real-life disputes such as custody, parenting time, child support, and related disputes between parents in family law cases.

In addition to these courses, the Law School offers two new practicums in Intellectual Property Law and Immigration Law, the Indiana Legal Services and Student Legal Services Externships, and a robust Public Interest Internship Program. The school also offers other hands-on opportunities such as the Inmate Legal Assistance Project, the Pro Bono Project, the Protective Order Project, and the Tenant Assistance Project.

About the Honor Roll of Donors

Through annual gifts from donors, the School of Law has been able to sustain and consistently expand resources for law journals, trial advocacy programs, scholarships, and the Law Library — which was recently given a top ranking by National Jurist magazine — among many other programs.

The Law School is deeply grateful to its donors for their investments. Every gift promotes the success of the School as it strives to increase its visibility and influence on the global legal conversation.

The 2005–2006 Honor Roll of Donors reflects gifts from July 1, 2005, to June 30, 2006. Gifts up to $25,000 — including unrestricted gifts and annual gifts to student organizations, scholarships, and the Law Library — are recognized as contributions to the Fund for Excellence. An asterisk (*) indicates that the donor is deceased.

Partners in Excellence

Partners in Excellence enable the Law School to plan for the future of mission-critical programs by pledging their sustained support to the School in the amount of $2,500 per year over a period of five years. The support of our Partners in Excellence makes possible the services and programs that distinguish Indiana Law from its peers. The Law School deeply appreciates the investment of this elite group of donors.

21st Century Society

The following list reflects far more than the names of people or organizations who have donated substantially to the Indiana University School of Law—Bloomington. The names represent lives touched in some way by this Law School, and friends whose experiences inspired them to reach out and help others. The 21st Century Society honors those valued friends and alumni who demonstrate their ongoing commitment through annual gifts to the Fund for Excellence of $1,000 or more. The School of Law is grateful for their loyalty and generosity, which form the foundation of the annual fund.

The Spirit of the Law

Forget every single bad lawyer joke you've ever heard. Turn instead to the best case scenario. Subject is Gene Shreve, law professor and one of the nicest guys you'll ever meet. Having led students through the process of law school for more than 30 years, Gene Shreve is an IU institution unto himself. "I still marvel at life and our endless potential for growth," he says before continuing, "I think it remarkable that year after year, the IU School of Law has been populated by truly wonderful people."

Gene's career began in the Massachusetts Department of Attorney General and as law clerk to a federal judge before spending several years as a poverty lawyer with the Boston Legal Assistance Project.

He returned to Harvard Law School to teach and pursue a graduate degree. Then, after faculty positions in Vermont; Washington, D.C.; and New York, he joined the IU School of Law faculty to teach Civil Procedure and Conflict of Laws.

His office used to be crammed with American folk art, but now brims with African and Oceanic art, an interest he developed while teaching in Paris. "I find that an office full of art removes a lot of the anxiety and stress students can feel when visiting a professor's office."

That compassion is vintage Shreve. His gift to the IU School of Law is tailored for people who wish to pursue the practice of law through some form of public service. "I wanted to support students who want to serve the public interest by pursuing a legal career outside the law firm partner track. Their idealism and social commitment should be rewarded."

Gene has won prestigious awards in both teaching and research, yet his demeanor remains unassuming and genuinely attentive. "I know a lot of law schools are internally quite competitive, but student and faculty members of the law community at IUB really support each other. That makes coming to work a pleasure. The enterprise of a law school is education, and a community environment is more conducive to learning."

The direction of Gene's gift stems from what life was like during his time as a law student. "My loan agreement contained a provision that offered loan forgiveness if I went into certain kinds of public interest work as a lawyer after graduation. This provision helped me out, but has long since vanished from law school loan agreements. To provide scholarships to students committed to practicing law in the public interest will restore some of that support."

Lawyer, professor, mentor, philosopher — Gene Shreve typifies the reason why the IU School of Law excels and why its graduates show such exemplary support. It's the spirit of the place and the people coming together for a greater good.

Nathaniel Holton, JD'09

“Feeling wanted plays a big part in deciding where you want to spend the next three years of your life. The McFarron award is a sign that the Law School really respects me and wants me to be here. Now that I’m here, I want to prove my worth and earn what I’ve been given.

Because of my scholarships, I’ll ultimately be able to go for the job that I truly want, regardless of salary. That is extremely important to me and it’s an honor to have that freedom.”

Holton is the first recipient of the Gary W. McFarron Intellectual Property Scholarship, an award established in 2005 to benefit female or minority incoming, first-year law students who have backgrounds in the hard sciences. Degrees in philosophy and mechanical engineering inform Holton’s law school experience as one of the 41 first-year JD candidates with degrees in physical sciences and engineering.

Gary McFarron, a shareholder at Cook Alex McFarron Manzo Cummings & Mehler Ltd., earned his law degree at Northwestern University School of Law and an undergraduate degree in mechanical engineering from Purdue University. Though not an alumnus, McFarron’s strong affinity for the Hoosier state and Indiana Law’s devotion to strengthen its already robust intellectual property program inspired him to invest in the School. His gift ensures generations of developing strong minds and creating opportunities.

A Passion for Public Service

Amanda Schneider let her heart guide her through law school. Now she's knee-deep in education law, advocating for children with disabilities as the first-ever William Guerri Chair Attorney for the Children's Legal Alliance at Legal Services of Eastern Missouri (LSEM).

As an Indiana Law student, Schneider was a diligent member of the Public Interest Law Foundation, was president of the Tenants Assistance Project, and served as committee chair for the Loan Repayment Assistance Program (LRAP). "Instead of pursuing Moot Court or law journal, I pursued clinics and volunteer opportunities outside of the classroom," she says.

Schneider speaks of LSEM and her work with passion and gratitude. Her dedication to poverty and disability law is deeply connected to personal experience. Her nephew, Nicholas, was born three months premature with cerebral palsy, and Schneider's firsthand view of her sister's financial and emotional struggle added perspective to her career goals.

"Many law students grow up with a middle-class mentality of stability," she says. "Suddenly, I realized that falling into an at-risk or poverty situation is closer for most of us than we really know. When you're confronted with that, it really shapes you."

"I am very grateful to LRAP for assistance with living expenses this year ... The most important thing in life for me is to do this work."

LRAP makes room for the important work

The American Bar Association reports that high student debt bars many law graduates from pursuing public service careers, and public service employers experience serious difficulty recruiting and retaining lawyers, which severely compromises low-income and indigent citizens' access to legal representation and justice.

"I have often been told by fellow colleagues that they 'cannot afford to do this kind of work.' I am probably in that precarious position myself," Schneider says.

The first-generation college graduate experienced the relief that LRAP assistance can provide as she transitioned from school to full-time work and awaited her bar exam results. Because her employer was not able to provide funds for relocation, BarBri fees, or other living expenses, money was tight until the first paycheck.

"I am very grateful to LRAP for assistance with living expenses this year, as my salary is probably the lowest in my graduating class," she says, noting that with or without the assistance she would still be committed to the job. "The most important thing in life for me is to do this work."

Kathleen A. Buck, JD'73

Kathleen Buck's career was characterized by high-profile events: investigations into the Iran-Contra affair, allegations of defense contractor fraud, and debates about drug testing in the workplace. She served as a key legal authority in the nation's capital during all of these recent episodes in our history. An Academy of Law Alumni Fellows member and a beloved 1973 alumna, her work in the public interest was recognized by countless organizations before her death in 2001.

The Kathleen Buck Loan Repayment Assistance Program, established with a bequest from her estate, serves as a lasting tribute to her outstanding service to the profession and the Law School. The Buck LRAP enables an increased number of our graduates to pursue government and public service careers.

The program is also a strong recruiting tool for the School, helping to cultivate a diverse student body by drawing a larger and more ethnically, racially, and experientially diverse pool of applicants.

Indiana Law strongly supports its students' efforts to serve the community by fostering involvement in clinics and client service projects such as Student Legal Services and Indiana Legal Services Externships, the Protective Order Project, the Pro Bono Project, and the Public Interest Internship Program. Buck's bequest extends this support to our graduates, shining a positive light on a legal profession that needs talented lawyers to represent underserved communities.

If you would like more information or want to make a contribution to the Kathleen A. Buck LRAP fund, please contact the development office.

Laura Koenig, JD'07

"I was delighted to learn of Professor (Gene) Shreve's substantial gift that will be directed solely to public interest scholarships. With solid financial support and the dedication of the School, faculty, and staff to public interest, the Law School will develop a national reputation for preparing thoughtful, committed citizens who will become community, organizational, and world leaders.

I am especially grateful for the John H. Edwards Fellowship. His exemplary life of service and his decision to support future generations of public servants enables students like me to roll up our sleeves and get to work without delay."

Koenig, a third-year student, received a 2006 John H. Edwards Fellowship. One of the most prestigious scholarships awarded by Indiana University, the honor is given to select students with superior scholastic ability, intellectual capacity, and good citizenship and character. Following graduation, Koenig hopes to clerk before practicing in indigent criminal defense.

Tom Lofton, JD'54

Last spring, alumnus Tom Lofton dedicated $250,000 to the Career Services Office. His goal was to help rising first- and second-year law students secure jobs, particularly in Indiana. Many students benefited from his gift during Summer Professional/Study Experiences. Their experiences will shape goals and nurture future careers in every area of legal practice.

Third-year student Jessica Polito reflects on her Summer Professional/Study Experience:

"A summer fellowship allowed me to learn from one of the best — Steven Trattner, an alumnus and expert trademark lawyer. Thanks to the fellowship, I was able to work with him in Washington, D.C., and since he is retiring in the very near future, he was able to share some of the wisdom he has gained from decades of practice.

This unique opportunity taught me so much, not only about the law and the legal profession but also about myself. Before this experience, I was worried that there was no place in the legal profession for a Hispanic female. The fact that someone such as Mr. Trattner had faith in my abilities has renewed my confidence and my dedication to the legal profession."

Class of 2006: Opportunity. Pass It On.

Maurice Williams noted the impact of giving during his 2006 commencement address.

A group of international graduate students celebrate the day.

As the theme of its class pledge campaign, the Class of 2006 chose the phrase “Opportunity. Pass it On.” An energetic and committed group of students led by Maurice Williams and Becky Bailey formed the class pledge committee that educated peers on the many ways alumni and private giving affected their law school experiences and opportunities. A significant Class of 2006 pledge passes those opportunities on to future generations of law students.

Williams, who served as commencement speaker, emphasized the importance of giving back to the School in his speech. “The odds are pretty good with your JD that endless opportunities will be available for you,” he told fellow graduates. “And when they come, be sure to pass them on. When you become that powerful lawyer that you always knew you would be, don’t forget about your law school experience or how you felt sitting in that chair today. ... Be an advocate for this institution and its students, because when Indiana Law does well, we all benefit.”

In a final plea for pledges, Williams made a more lighthearted request, “Remember, for as little as 14 cents a day, you can help brighten some poor student’s day and make this institution a better place.”

“Law school would not have been nearly as rewarding for me without the scholarships I received...”

— Becky Bailey,
pledge campaign co-chair

His remarks ring true. The Class of 2006 campaign marks the third year of class pledge campaigns designed to educate graduating students about the impact private giving has on the quality of education at Indiana Law. These campaigns are building a base of support that will enable future generations of alumni to increase and enhance the funding for mission-critical educational programs at the School.

“I was happy to contribute to the class pledge campaign, both through my time and my pledge,” says Becky Bailey. “Law school would not have been nearly as rewarding for me without the scholarships I received and without the help of the Law School administration, especially Dean Len Fromm. I know that alumni gifts support these services, and I am happy to be able to give back.”

Class of 2006 Campaign

Over the past three years, graduating Indiana Law students have made their regard for the School clear with the emergence of the “Funding Our Future” campaign. Through this campaign, students can make a pledge to the School to be allocated over five years. The School of Law thanks our recent graduates.

Bloomington, IN 47402-2298

Gifts by Credit Card

To charge your gift using Visa, MasterCard, American Express, or Discover, please call (812) 855-2075.

Or, visit our Web site to make a secure gift online through the IU Foundation.

Gifts by Electronic Transfer

Your gift to the Law School can be deducted automatically each month from your checking account or credit card. For more information, please call the director of annual giving at (812) 855-2075, or access a printable form via the “Ways to Give” page of our Web site: www.law.indiana.edu/alumni/development/ways_to_give.

Gifts of Securities

The Law School welcomes gifts of securities and appreciated stock. For more information, call the director of annual giving at (812) 855-2075. Or visit our Web site at www.law.indiana.edu/alumni/development/ways_to_give, or go directly to the IU Foundation’s Web site for additional information.

Law Firm and Corporate Matching Gifts

Matching gifts can double or triple your gift to Indiana Law. Please contact your personnel or benefits office to request the necessary forms. To find out if your organization has a matching program, go to www.matchinggifts.com/IUF/.

Corporations, Foundations, and Law Firms

How does the School of Law manage to consistently improve its national rankings, attract top students and professors, and offer increasingly competitive scholarships? Gifts from corporations, foundations, law firms, and other organizations enable the School to maintain — and improve — its standard of excellence. The following list includes organizations that made a direct gift to the School or matched contributions from alumni supporters. The School of Law is grateful for these invaluable partnerships.

Heritage Society

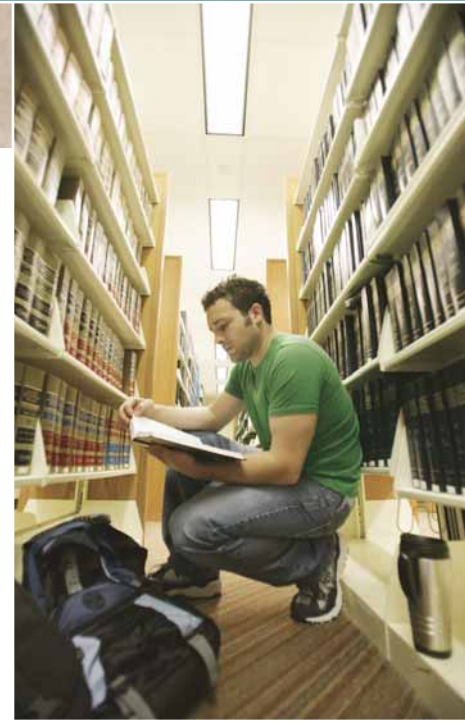

Established in 1991 to provide a framework for lasting bequests and to foster future legal education, the Heritage Society honors friends and alumni who invest in the School through deferred gifts. These gifts provide funds for Law School projects, or they endow chairs, professorships, or scholarships. The generosity of Heritage Society members ensures that the School of Law can continue to offer the highest quality legal education.

Membership in the Heritage Society is open to all who make a planned or deferred gift commitment to the School of Law. This is accomplished by naming the School of Law—Bloomington as a beneficiary through a bequest in a will, charitable remainder unitrust or annuity trust, pooled income fund, charitable gift annuity, life insurance, retirement plan, or other life-income arrangements. Members of the Heritage Society are automatically included in the Indiana University Foundation's planned giving society, the Arbutus Society.

We are pleased to recognize and thank the members of the Heritage Society.

Giving to the Fund for Excellence

Annual giving is vital to Indiana Law's mission to provide excellence in legal education. The Fund for Excellence, the Law School's annual giving program, provides the dean with the flexibility to enhance academic and co-curricular programs that make the crucial difference between an adequate education and a truly excellent one.

Student Programs

Law students benefit directly from your gift to the Fund for Excellence, which supports all of the Law School's student services and programs beyond classroom education. Contributions to the Fund for Excellence go toward scholarships; three law journals; 25 student organizations; community advocacy programs; the Law Library; and the offices of Career Services, Admissions, and Student Affairs. These programs, to name only a few, are essential in preparing our students to serve the profession and their communities according to the highest standards.

Alumni Support

Every gift to the Fund for Excellence, at any level, is critical to the success of the Law School. Strong evidence of alumni support is important to the School's ability to leverage funding from other sources. Corporations, foundations, and potential major donors frequently use alumni participation rates (i.e., how many alumni give, not the total amount of the gifts) when deciding whether to award grants or make significant gifts. Matching gifts from employers also increase dollars raised for the Fund for Excellence.

Reputation

The Fund for Excellence supports mission-critical programs that greatly improve the Law School's reputation. As the Law School's reputation increases, so does the value of your degree.

For more information, please contact Catherine Dyar, director of annual giving, at (812) 855-2075 or via e-mail at cedyar@indiana.edu.
